The citizens of the town should turn out enmasse on Tuesday and march to the station when the detachment entrains for Belleville. The town will miss the boys when they go and should give them a rousing send-off. The detachment from here is a credit to any town to turn out. Though not strong in numbers the boys are of the proper stuff and will right worthily uphold the honor of Canada.

Mrs. F. F. Miller has supplied all the men of the detachment with "housewives" which are much appreciated by the men and they again take this opportunity of thanking Mrs. Miller for her many kindnesses.

MORVEN.

Mr. Monk, of Bethany, who was to preach in the Methodist Churches here last Sunday, was taken ill and unable to attend. Mr. Bartlett, of Albert College, was secured in time to fill the appointments however, and rendered excellent service. Those who heard him last Sunday will be glad to know that he will take the services next Sunday, March 28th, at a Brick Church at 10 a.m., at Lutheran Church at 3 p.m., and at Whit Church at 7 p.m. Let all the people in this time of deep anxiety, with demands growing out of the awful European war pressing sorely upon us, remember our sanctuary duties and privileges. "The Lord is in His Holy Temple."

With some of our farmers in the sugar bush and others already sowing grain, with the accompaniment of Robin Redbreast's cheery song, we may surely say, "Happy Springtime."

WAR VOTE PASSED AMID CHEERS

Ottawa, March 24.—Parliament passed its one hundred million additional war appropriation in less than ten minutes. The Government presented the resolution to the House at this morning's sitting. Liberalism made good its assurance that the Opposition was ready and eager to vote every dollar for war purposes without question or criticism. All Canada remains united on the supreme issue involved, in the war. Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose, on the presentation of the resolution by the Premier, to tender the Liberals' hearty support and united co-operation. The resolution passed amid cheers and the bill based upon it was immediately given a first reading.

GULL CREEK.

Dear Editor—I think it is about time that you had a line from this stirring little place.

A kitchen shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Thompson on their return from a short honeymoon in Napanee. Many and costly were the presents, showing the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held in this community. The evening was spent in singing and games, after which a lovely supper was served.

The infant daughter of Mrs. W. Woodcock had the misfortune to fall in a boiler of boiling water. She is very dangerously ill, with Dr. Mitchell in attendance.

Mr. Wm. Tryan lost a very valuable cow last week by eating old grass.

Miss Pearl Kellar spent the week-end at Mrs. Dryus Detlor's, attending the kitchen shower of Mr. and Mrs. H. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hardwick spent Saturday evening at W. Hughes.

Mr. Amos Walker is visiting his mother in Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Walker visited a couple of days at Amos Walker's at Elm Tree.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lott at Mr. Jack Herod's on Sunday.

Several persons on this street are down with the grippe.

THE GERMAN (OR DEUTSCHER) CULTURE.

Editor "The Express."

Sir:—We hear much of German or Deutscher, (the Germans call themselves Die Deutsche,) culture; bit is it the correct kind of culture?

If we see a field of grain, growing strong, free from weeds, with a healthy appearance, we say there is good soil culture and grain culture, and that it indicates a knowledge of both on the part of the owner. But if we see grain full of weeds and poor and thin, it shows a lack of culture or defective culture.

If we see people strong, healthy, vigorous and also industrious, doing their fair share of work, day by day we feel that their bodily life proceeds according to the laws of health culture. If you try to culture a person's health correctly, you must teach him (or her) the laws of good health; you must be sure that he (or she) understands these laws, and learns them, and also puts them into practice in his (or her) daily living. Then the outcome will be good health every day, instead of sickness, disease, weakness and death. Culture is not life itself, but it is the putting into practice of the laws of good health, in such a manner that the life, being freed from the trammels and restraints which disease and wrong habits of eating, drinking, working, sleeping, etc., impose upon it, flows on strongly, firmly, correctly, in its God-designed course. Such is culture in the matter of health or physical life.

There is also culture of the mental, nature, faculties and powers; also culture of the moral nature, faculties and powers; also culture of the spiritual nature and powers; and culture of the psychic or emotional and aesthetic nature, faculties and powers. There is culture of a person as a unit of society; also industrial culture of a person as a unit or part of the industrial fabric of the community or nation looked at as workers for all and each; also military culture.

Culture should never destroy freedom, only guide freedom into its proper channels. Life is essentially freedom; but this freedom must be guided into and in the proper channels, because untutored freedom will surely run into excesses. But when there is so much culture that freedom dies, then joy dies and life dies. But the perfect culture will allow full freedom into the proper channels; because while everyone has the right to be free to do and be the best for himself (or herself) no one has the right to be free to do the bad or the wrong.

Military culture, while it may have many good points, is very apt, if it goes to excess, to give a person a false sense of superiority to everyone else; but it has no right to disregard the laws of humanity or decency or Christian charity or of that God-culture which God, by His truths and dealings gives to men, and women as parts of the created world.

OTTAWA, March 23.—Up to the total deaths among the Canadians number 194. This is the list of those killed in action or have died from wounds sustained in action. Twice this number have been wounded. The figures show clearly that the Canadian division is doing its share and contributing its quota to the cause of the Empire.

The heavy casualty lists from Canadian forces arriving these days with an unerring continuity show that our troops are in the thick of the fighting. The growing list of dead and wounded indicates its rifle character.

A despatch from London says eight more Canadians have received treatment at the Queen's Hospital at St. Cliffe, bringing the total number of patients since the institution opened to over two hundred. Only one, Higinbotham, has died.

From what these patients say evident the greater portion of Canadians were held as reserve for the recent costly operations. Their duty was to engage the German forces if the latter were brought but as things turned out the Germans melted away before the British attack. Nevertheless the Canadians in reserve had nearly fifty their number laid aside.

The following casualties among members of the Canadian Expeditionary

War Has Depleted Lines Running to and From Canada.

OTTAWA, March 23.—The House spent practically all of yesterday's sitting in committee of supply. The steamship subsidies, amounting to nearly $4,000,000, were passed after a brief discussion, and the estimates for the Indian Department involving $2,000,000 were reported last evening.

While the total steamship subsidy vote asked was a trifle under $4,000,000, Sir George Foster stated that probably not over $2,500,000 would be actually expended. He said that the arrangement made by the Government for improved mail service between Canada and the United Kingdom had been sadly demoralized as a result of the war. The Admiralty had requisitioned the Canadian Northern vessels, nearly all of the C. P. R. vessels and many vessels of the Allan Line. The steamship companies had, therefore, been unable to comply with the contract, and the payments, on account of subsidies, had been reduced accordingly.

When a vote was asked for the steamship service between eastern Canadian ports and Australia, A. K. MacLean asked what progress had been made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce toward securing a reciprocal trade arrangement with Australia. Sir George Foster said in reply that little had been accomplished. The new Australian tariff increased duties generally and gave a 10 per cent. preference to imports from the United Kingdom. No preference, however, had been given to imports from Canada.

Shortly after the House convened yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister referred to the death of Col. Farquhar, commander of the Princess Pats, who had been killed in action at the front. He said the news would be received with sincere regret by the people of Canada. None of the distinguished men holding the position of military secretary to the Governor-General had been more efficient or more highly regarded.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke briefly, joining in the tribute to the late officer.

Canadian Aviator Buried.

PRESCOTT, Ont., March 23.—The funeral of the late Lieut. W. F. Sharp, the Canadian aviator accidentally killed some weeks ago in England, took place from the residence of his uncle, J. W. Mills, here yesterday afternoon, the remains being accorded full military honors by the 56th Rifles.

PARIS, March 22.—An eyewitness of the flight of the Zeppelin over St. Leu Taveranis, toward Paris Sunday morning, declares that one of the airships suddenly made a dive toward the earth and expressed the belief that it had been hit by fragments of shell.

This man saw the first Zeppelin 1.35 o'clock, clearly outlined in the rays of a searchlight, flying at a height estimated at 2,500 yards. The Zeppelin opened a head fire, but the shells burst too low at the aircraft rose to a higher altitude and escaped from the light of the searchlight reflectors.

Forty-five minutes later the man saw another Zeppelin, and at the same time the cannonading was resumed.

The shells, according to the eyewitness, began to burst nearer and nearer the huge envelope and finally the aircraft began to descend rapidly.

Several times it endeavored to attain a higher altitude but was unable to do so, and made off eventually reduced speed.

Defence Law In Force.

ROME, March 23.—The King has signed the decree promulgating the national defence law, which became operative at once. The Government is empowered by the new law to prohibit the publication of news regarding the strength of the army, war preparations and military defences of the country. This prohibition will be strictly enforced, and the concentration of troops, the calling out of additional reserves and eventually the mobilization will be kept a secret.

Parliament has adjourned until the middle of May, and the Government will be free to attend to its final preparations.

Another British Ship Sunk.

LONDON, March 23.—The British steamer Concord, of 1,325 tons, was torpedoed by a German submarine in the English Channel yesterday. The crew of 26 men were rescued by patrol boat and landed at Dover. The vessel is reported to be still afloat.

A daily passenger and mail service between Flushing, Holland, and England, has been resumed, according to a despatch from Flushing to Reuter Telegram Co.

A Copenhagen despatch to The Daily Telegraph says that during the great storm two big German merchant steamers were lost off Denmark.

Nineteen members of the crew of the German cruiser Dresden, sunk off Juan Fernandez Island on Sunday by British warships, are missing.

TANGSZARGEN TAKEN.

East Prussian Town Falls Prey to Russian Advance.

LONDON, March 23.—Russian troops continue successfully to prosecute their invasion of East Prussia by way of Tauroggen, and after considerable resistance in which they won an engagement, they entered Tangszargen yesterday, capturing a number of prisoners and a quantity of engineering stores. Elsewhere on the front from the Vistula to Memel no important change is recorded. The claims of the Germans that they have recaptured Memel is not taken cognizance of by the Russian War Office. It is believed here that the report was inspired to encourage the German people.

The Russians appear to be gaining a decisive advantage everywhere in the Carpathian fighting. Stubborn resistance is being put up by the Austrians and Germans against the Russian advance on Bartfeld. This is being conducted on the Bartfeld roads, the Ondawa and Laborczs river valleys, and on the left bank of the San, and progress is being made in all these movements. The Russians continue the capturing of thousands of prisoners, including 50 officers and 20 machine guns in one day.

During the last few days there has been a great movement of troops all over Belgium, says Rotterdam advices. Whole German armies are going along the principal road between Bruges and Brussels. Heavy fighting has been proceeding, and the cannonading is ceaseless day and night.

According to a frontier telegram a German soldier in Belgium stated to the correspondent:

"On one day of last week, if the allies had been able to hold out for a few more hours and could have brought up a few more troops they could have broken through our line and could have gotten through to Ostend. Fortunately we got our re-inforcements up first."

FIFTY MEN KILLED.

Avalanche Falls on Britannia Mine Buildings Near Vancouver.

WINNIPEG, March 23.—A Vancouver report which has just reached the city says that a snowslide which came down at midnight, carried away a number of bunkhouses filled with workmen at Britannia Mine, Howe Sound, twenty miles from Vancouver. The mine is several miles from shore and it is impossible to obtain full details of the disaster. One despatch says fifty miners were killed and as many others injured.

The slide swept away a bunk house containing 150 men, a cook house containing 10 men and several private houses, in which were a number of women and children. Several men who were going off the night shift at midnight were also killed.

At last reports rescuers were working on the pile of debris, but few bodies were found. Fifteen of the injured were being brought to Vancouver by steamer. Besides the bunk houses part of the aerial tramway of the mine was carried away.

PRZEMYSL HAS FALLEN

Strong Galician Fortress Hoists the White Flag.

Heroic Garrison, Which Has Withstood Siege Since the Beginning of the War, Has Been Starved Into Submission — Big Russian Force Released For Other Phases—Over 50,000 Prisoners.

LONDON, March 23.—Przemyśl has fallen. Fifty thousand of the enemy, mainly Austrians, plied their arms without firing a shot. The last effort of the exhausted garrison to break through was made on Thursday night, and met with a disastrous repulse. Famished by the pangs of hunger, weakened with disease, and their ranks thinned by repeated defeats at the hands of a superior and tireless foe, the heroic garrison, cut off from its main army, at length yielded to fate. Without food, the last available horse slaughtered to satisfy the pangs of hunger, the defenders of this Galician fortress saved their honor while surrendering their swords. The defence of Przemyśl has won the admiration of friend and foe alike. The news of its fall led to an enthusiastic demonstration in the streets of Petrograd.

The official statement announcing the fall of Przemyśl was as follows:

"The fortress of Przemyśl has surrendered to our troops. At the headquarters of the commander-in-chief a Te Deum of thanksgiving was celebrated in the presence of Emperor Nicholas, Grand Duke Nicholas, the commander-in-chief of the Russian army, and all members of the General Staff."

An official report issued in Petrograd states:

"In consequence of the joyful event of the surrender of the fortress of Przemyśl, Generalissimo the Grand Duke Nicholas has been awarded the St. George's Cross of the second degree, and Gen. Seliwanoff, commander of the army before Przemyśl, has been awarded the St. George's Cross of the third degree."

A Petrograd despatch says:

"The Przemyśl garrison, which capitulated to the Russian army yesterday, surrendered without a fight. The hoisting of the white flag over this fortress, which was said to be on the point of surrender on a number of occasions, caused little surprise, as it was generally known that it was in a terribly weakened condition, without food or ammunition, and its endurance was only a question of days.

"War Office advices reports that nine Austrian generals were taken, as well as more than 300 officers and 50,000 men.

"The Russian general commanding the investing army has been decorated with St. George's Cross.

"The moral effect of the victory on Russia will be very great.

"The ending of the long siege is of great importance. It gives Russia control of virtually all of Eastern Galicia and releases the Russian army which has been besieging the city for service elsewhere."

The London newspapers assert that the fall of the fortress marks the most important capture of the war, not excepting Antwerp, in that it not only releases considerable Russian forces which can be thrown into the fluctuating struggle in the Carpathians, but opens the door to Cracow and the plains of Hungary.

It is argued, moreover, that the moral effect of the surrender will be tremendous, the theory of the allies being that it will stimulate feeling in

THE GOLDEN FLEECE.
An Ancient Method of Collecting the Precious Yellow Dust.

In the legend of the golden fleece lies hidden the record of an ancient method of the Tibarent, the sons of Tubal, for the collection of gold. The north coast of Asia Minor produced large quantities of the precious metals as well as copper and iron. Gold was found in the gravel, as often happens still in streams draining from copper regions. The gold in copper ores, originally containing insignificant amounts of the precious metal, accumulates in the course of ages and sometimes forms placers of astonishing richness.

The ancient Tibarent washed the gold bearing gravel first by booming, which concentrated the gold into relatively small amounts of sand. This was then collected and washed through sluices having the bottoms lined with sheepskins. The gold would sink into the wool, while the sand would be washed away in the swift current, writes Courtenay de Kalb in the Mining Age.

The skins were removed from the rigible Finally Righted Itself and Made Off at Reduced Speed.

PARIS, March 23.—An eye-witness of the flight of the Zeppelin or St. Leu Taveranis, towards his Sunday morning, declares that one of the airships suddenly made a veer toward the earth and expressed a belief that it had been hit by a fragment of shell.

This man saw the first Zeppelin at 5 o'clock, clearly outlined in the sky of a searchlight, flying at a height estimated at 2,500 yards. The Zeppelin opened a heavy fire, but the shells burst too low and the aircraft rose to a higher altitude and escaped from the light of the searchlight reflectors.

Forty-five minutes later the man saw another Zeppelin, and at the same time the cannonading was renewed.

The shells, according to the eyewitness, began to burst nearer and nearer the huge envelope and finally the aircraft began to descend rapidly. Several times it endeavored to attain a higher altitude but was unable to do so, and made off eventually at reduced speed.

Defence Law In Force.

ROME, March 23.—The King has issued the decree promulgating the new defence law, which became operative at once. The Government is empowered by the new law to prohibit the publication of news regarding the strength of the army, war preparations and military defences of the country. This prohibition will be strictly enforced, and the concentration of troops, the calling out of additional reserves and eventually the mobilization will be kept a secret. Parliament has adjourned until the middle of May, and the Government will be free to attend to the military preparations.

Another British Ship Sunk.

LONDON, March 23.—The British merchant ship Concord, of 1,825 tons, was reported by a German submarine in the English Channel yesterday. The crew of 26 men were rescued by a motor boat and landed at Dover. The ship is reported to be still afloat.

Daily passenger and mail service between Flushing, Holland, and England, has been resumed, according to a despatch from Flushing to Reuters Telegram Co.

Copenhagen despatch to The Telegraph says that during a storm two big German merchant steamers were lost off Denmark.

Nineteen members of the crew of the German cruiser Dresden, sunk off the Fernandez Island on Sunday by British warships, are missing.

NO MENTION OF DIMITRIEFF.

Russian General Has Evidently Been Supplanted at Przemysl.

LONDON, March 23.—The mention in the Russian official statement of the decoration of Gen. Seliwanoff as commander of the army besieging Przemysl, has created considerable surprise in London, as it was understood Gen. Rakdo Dimitrieff, was in command. Where he was transferred or was removed is not known.

The London papers print eulogies and the picture of Gen. Dimitrieff as "the hero of Przemysl."

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The rough draft of the representations which the United States will make to Great Britain, and in which such objections as this Government finds to the British order-in-council has been prepared for reference to the Cabinet and will furnish the principal subject of to-day's deliberations. This announcement was made at the White House yesterday, and is accepted as indicating that the administration has determined to await no longer for the supplementary statement which the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs promised in the preliminary note accompanying the transcript of the order-in-council itself.

Invalided "Pats" Return.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 23.—A number of the men from the Princess Patricia's Regiment returned home Sunday on the steamer Missanable.

Pte. Oscar Tichfield, of Red Deer, Alta., a member of the Patricia's, was brought ashore on a stretcher Sunday morning. He was taken to the military hospital, and will probably be sent home. He is seriously ill.

Another soldier named Herbert Burgess was taken to the quarantine hospital for observation for suspected spinal meningitis. With him went three of his comrades, who had exposed themselves to contagion.

May Abandon Sealer.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 23.—Further misfortune to the sealing fleet was reported last night when word came that the steamer Eagle, one of the eight jammed in the ice off the eastern coast of Newfoundland, was in a serious plight in Notre Dame Bay. Captain Bishop sent a wireless to the owners, that arrangements had been made to abandon the ship.

Murder In Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, March 23.—Mrs. Jos. Hutchison, aged 25, widow of Jos. Hutchison, coal and wood dealer, was murdered early yesterday in her office, corner of East street and Logan avenue by Jack Lesky. Lesky then committed suicide with the razor with which he attacked Mrs. Hutchison. Murder was preceded by quarrel.

control or virtually all of Eastern Galicia and releases the Russian army which has been besieging the city for service elsewhere."

The London newspapers assert that the fall of the fortress marks the most important capture of the war, not excepting Antwerp, in that it not only releases considerable Russian forces which can be thrown into the fluctuating struggle in the Carpathians, but opens the door to Cracow and the plains of Hungary.

It is argued, moreover, that the moral effect of the surrender will be tremendous, the theory of the allies being that it will stimulate feeling in their favor both in Roumania and Bulgaria, just as the operations in the Dardanelles are causing an agitation in Greece and Italy.

Przemysl fell with honor, the British press concedes, for it withstood the onslaughts longer than any place during the war, the investment having begun something more than six months ago. The duration of the siege, compared with the length of time it took the Germans to capture such strongholds as Liege, Namur and Antwerp, was due to two causes, one being the desire of the Russians to keep the loss of life among the besieging army at a minimum, the other to the lack of great guns, which the Germans had in Belgium.

The investment was not a close one, the garrison having had up until recently a radius of about twelve miles in which to move about.

Sentry Shoots Buffalo Man.

BUFFALO, March 23.—George B. Montgomery, of Buffalo, was shot by a British sentry while he was sailing in the harbor at Hamilton, Bermuda, last Saturday, according to information received here last night. One of his legs was so badly hurt that the foot had to be amputated. With him in the boat at the time was his wife and a negro pilot.

The report received here says the boat approached too near the prohibited water surrounding an island where German soldiers are imprisoned.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht Muzzled.

LONDON, March 23.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. has received a despatch from Copenhagen saying that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist deputy, has been ordered to place himself at the disposal of the German military authorities, according to The Politiken of that city. Henceforth he must consider himself under military law. He is not to write articles, nor will he be permitted to attend public political meetings, excepting the Reichstag and the Landtag.

The skins were removed from the sluices, the coarser gold shaken out, and the fleeces, still glittering with the yellow metal, were hung upon boughs to dry so that the rest of the gold might be beaten from them and saved. The early Greek mariners, witnessing this process, carried home tales of the wonderful riches of a land where a warlike race of miners hung golden fleeces upon the trees in the grove of Ares.

ALLIGATORS OF PANAMA.

One Man Eater That Had Terrorized Two Neighboring Villages.

With other white companions I have often plunged into the waters of the Tuyra, a fairly large river which flows into the gulf of Panama after having traversed immense stretches of impenetrable forests. Regularly a score or so of alligators assisted at our gambols at a distance of thirty or forty yards, and we came to look upon them as quite harmless.

After an absence of two years I returned and in two neighboring villages found the inhabitants terrified. No one dared to go near the river at nightfall. No one ventured, even in broad daylight, to cross the stream in the narrow canoes which are used by the natives to carry bananas and vegetables from their plantations.

The cause of this terror, I discovered, was an alligator that had devoured thirty persons in less than two months, surprising some on the river bank and literally snapping others out of their canoes. Thirty people, and the two villages together only numbered 250 souls!

After a series of fruitless attempts we ended in capturing the brute with a baited hook, an enormous affair, to which we fastened half a pig. The creature was close on twenty-four feet long. He was so old that seaweed and mosses were growing between his scales, and he presented the appearance of a tree trunk that had been a long time submerged. He was, we estimated, more than 100 years old.—Paul Dreyer in Wide World Magazine.

Frederick's War on Coffee.

In a manifesto issued by Frederick the Great in 1779 the mighty monarch deplored "the increased consumption of coffee by my subjects and the amount of money that goes out of the country in consequence. Everybody is using coffee. This must no longer be. My subjects must drink beer. His majesty was brought up on beer, and so were his ancestors. Innumerable battles have been fought and won by soldiers nourished on beer, and the king does not believe that coffee drinking soldiers can be depended upon to endure hardships or to conquer his enemies should another war occur." Coffee roasting was made a government monopoly, and a prohibitive price was charged for the berry. "Coffee smelters" were appointed all over Prussia to check illicit roasting. Coffee was therefore ousted from popular favor.—London Chronicle.

When Napoleon Died.

July 10, 1821.—The news has just arrived of the death of Napoleon. He died on the 5th of May. I was much astonished at the way the news was received. The hero which the whole French nation had worshiped, whom all Europe had trembled before, it might have been an ordinary actor who had died. Really one could feel great disgust. A mighty man indeed he was with all his faults. The first I heard of it was cried about the streets, "La Mort de Napoleon a St. Helene, Deux Sous." When "Stonewall" Jackson started out on a campaign he took along no personal baggage except a withered carpetbag of ancient pattern, and even this modest receptacle was but half filled. Both these generals bear distinguished reputations as successful leaders.

Contrariwise, when Napoleon III, emperor of France, left Paris in 1870 to take command of the armies which, he said, were going straight to Berlin he took along forty-eight trunks besides a most voluminous kitchen and bedroom equipage. The Germans got every scrap of it all at Sedan. The Rack, Pace and Amble.

The rack is a gait of the horse between a trot and a gallop or canter, in which the fore feet move as in a slow gallop, while the hind feet move as in a trot or pace. It is usually an artificial gait, but is sometimes hereditary or natural. There is much confusion of terms in respect to this gait, due to the fact that the gait itself is somewhat varied, according as the racker carries the one or the other fore foot foremost in the galloping motion of the fore feet; that many confound the rack with the pace, the words often being used synonymously, and that many have mistaken the use of the words "pace" and "amble." There is abundant evidence that the American pace of today is the amble of Europeans of the last century and earlier. The motion of the hind feet is the same in the trot, the pace and the rack. In the trot the diagonal hind and fore feet move nearly simultaneously. In the pace or amble the hind and fore feet of the same side move nearly simultaneously.—Boston Globe.

Ceremonial Citron.

A valuable and somewhat curious variety of citron is cultivated along the shores of Albania, western European Turkey. It is known as the "casenia" or "esrog" (Hebrew). It is a small citron, weighing not more than twenty-five drams, just large enough to be held in the hand, and is thus used in the religious ritual by the Jews all over the world during the celebration of their feast of tabernacles. Such citrons, if sufficiently small, without blemish and possessing somewhat extended nozzles, are valued at from $4 to $10 each. These citrons are mostly exported from Parga, Turkey, and not from Corfu, as is generally supposed. A few are said to grow near Diakovo, Greece.

To Make Whitewash.

The following is the government whitewash recipe:

Take a half bushel of unslaked lime, slake it with boiling water, cover it during the process to keep in steam, strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer and add to it a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water, three pints of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stir in while hot. Add five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well and let stand a few days covered as nearly air tight as possible. It can be colored by adding ochre, lamp black, ground keel or bluing to suit.

enon known as the "fire ship" is sometimes seen by night. It is a roughly hemispherical mass of luminosity, with its flat side to the water, but sometimes it rises in slender moving columns that resemble the flaming rigging of a ship. It is supposed to foretell a storm. No satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon has ever been given.

"Andes lightning" is the name given to a very striking luminous discharge of electricity seen over the crest of the Andes, in Chile, in a region where ordinary thunderstorms are almost unknown. The mountains appear to act as gigantic lightning rods, between which and the clouds silent discharges take place on a vast scale. A continuous glow is seen about the summits, with occasional outbursts like the beams of a great searchlight. These displays have been seen by vessels 300 miles from the coast.

Among the snow clad Alps a curious and beautiful phenomenon is sometimes observed at the close of the day. The rosy illumination of the mountain summits passes away, from below upward, as the sun sinks below the opposite horizon, and for a few minutes the peaks, with their rocks and snows, have a livid appearance; then gradually they are lighted up with a second rosy glow, and this may last for as much as an hour after sunset. This is called the "recoloration of the Alps," or, in the case of the giant of the group, the "resurrection of Mont Blanc." The whole series of phenomena is called the "alpenglow."—Youth's Companion.

BLOOD OF THE VIKINGS.

The Men Whose Descendants Conquered Normandy and England.

The vikings and their followers who swarmed up the Seine and the Thames and whose descendants conquered Normandy and then England were bred of long years of independence and property rights, while those they overthrew were dependent and nonland owners. They were the hardest and boldest travelers of their time.

The Norwegian seafarers still cruise about the sea as far north as it is open, and the history of polar exploration has been associated with Norway from Othar in King Alfred's time to Nansen in our own. In the Shetland islands the people still talked Norwegian in the last century. Greenland and Iceland were colonized from Norway, and from Iceland comes a literature in old Norwegian, still the language of the people, which ranks with the hero tales of the east, of Greece, of Germany and England.

The Orkneys, the Shetlands, the Hebrides and the Isle of Man were possessions of Norway for hundreds of years, and for more than 300 years Norwegian kings ruled in Dublin. Many of the Danes who conquered England were Norsemen, and the conquerors of Normandy were mostly of the Norwegian viking blood—Price Collier in Scribner's Magazine.

TWO VIEWS OF A DANDY.

In Which Carlyle and Dr. Holmes Took Opposite Sides.

When your gaze runs afoot of a man adorned with a wrist watch and pink socks and a purple necktie, think kindly or unkindly of him—it all depends upon whether you swear by Thomas Carlyle or Oliver Wendell Holmes, both of whom have furnished intimate descriptions of the "dandy." Says the former in "Sartor Resartus":

"A dandy is a clothes wearing man—a man whose trade, office and existence is the wearing of clothes. Every faculty of his soul, spirit, purse and person is heroically consecrated to this one object, the wearing of clothes wise and well, so that, as others dress to live, he lives to dress."

And now look on the other side of the picture furnished by Holmes:

"There was Alcibiades, the 'curled son of Clinias,' an accomplished young man, but what would be called a

A STUBBORN ARTIST.

Mansfield Wanted a Likeness, and the Painter Gave It.

Richard Mansfield once asked Frank A. Nankivell to make a picture of him. The actor explained that he wanted an imitation of an old Roman coin with his own profile shown instead of Caesar's.

"Do you want an absolute likeness, or shall I idealize it a bit?" asked Nankivell.

"I want an absolute likeness," replied Mr. Mansfield stiffly, and the artist made a sketch of his patron.

When the completed picture—a splendid piece of work that looks as if it were embossed—was shown to Mr. Mansfield he was not pleased.

"It looks like a prizefighter," said Mr. Mansfield.

"That is not my fault," said Nankivell. "You know that you said you wanted a likeness."

There was a further exchange of courtesies, and then Mansfield suggested that the artist try again. "Excuse me," said Nankivell. "Once will do me."

"Well, change this picture a little," said the actor. "Perhaps you can fix it up."

"Not a fix," said the artist as he rolled up the picture and prepared to go with a parting shot. "You don't want an artist to draw your picture; you want a lithographer. Good day."

A GENERAL'S BAGGAGE.

It Is No Indication of the Fighting Quality of the Man.

It may be laid down as a military axiom that a general's ability is not measured by the amount of baggage he takes to war.

It is said that when General Sir John French embarked to take command of the British forces fighting with the French against the Germans in northern France all the baggage he took was contained in a single suit case.

When "Stonewall" Jackson started out on a campaign he took along no personal baggage except a withered carpetbag of ancient pattern, and even this modest receptacle was but half filled. Both these generals bear distinguished reputations as successful leaders.

Contrariwise, when Napoleon III, emperor of France, left Paris in 1870 to take command of the armies which

WEATHER PRANKS

Oddities of Atmosphere, Clouds, Fogs and Lightning.

THIRSTY WINDS OF THE ALPS.

They Drink Up All Moisture So Quickly That Everything Becomes as Dry as Tinder—Andes Lightning and the Fire Ship of the Bay of Chaleur.

Cloud caps form on mountain tops when a current of moist air ascends the slope of the mountain, for the air cools as it rises and the moisture in it condenses.

On the flat top of Table mountain, near Cape Town, a strong southeast wind produces a horizontal sheet of cloud known as the "tablecloth." This cloud often appears to pour over the steep leeward side of the mountain like a mighty cataract. The "spreading of the tablecloth" is a sign of bad weather. At a little distance from the mountain a second cloud often forms.

A similar pair of clouds often seen near Cross fell, in England, are known as the "helm and bar." The helm, or helmet, forms over the mountain when a violent wind known as the "helm wind" is blowing. The bar appears a mile or two to leeward.

At Callao, on the coast of Peru, sailors often encounter a foul smelling fog that deposits a brown slimy coating on white paint and metal and hence is called the "painter."

Another remarkable fog on the Peruvian coast is known as the "garua." It occurs in a region where rain is unknown and supplies sufficient moisture to support vegetation.

Red fogs frequently occur off the northwest coast of Africa, between the Canaries and the Cape Verde islands. They are sometimes so dense as to make navigation difficult. The color is owing to dust that the trade wind brings from the Sahara desert.

Certain valleys in the Alps are often visited by a very warm and dry wind known as the "fohn." The effects of this wind are particularly striking in winter. The snow melts and evaporates as if by magic; woodwork becomes as dry as tinder, and great precautions are necessary to prevent the occurrence of the disastrous fires known as "fohn fires" that often destroy whole towns and villages. No cooking is permitted while the fohn is blowing, and not even a pipe or a cigarette may be lighted. Many persons suffer with "fohn sickness" whenever this wind prevails. The chinook of the western United States is similar in character and origin to the fohn.

Over the waters of the bay of Chaleur, in Canada, a mysterious phenomenon known as the "fire ship" is sometimes seen by night. It is a roughly hemispherical mass of luminosity, with its flat side to the water, but sometimes it rises in slender moving columns that resemble the flaming rigging of a ship. It is supposed to foretell a storm. No satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon has ever been given.

WIRELESS IN WAR

Upon It the Fate of a Battle Fleet May Often Depend.

SEARCHING FOR THE ENEMY

The Cruisers Take the Lead and Act as Scouts, Keeping in Touch With Other Ships—Another and Report by Wireless the Battleships That Follow.

Very few people realize the great importance of wireless telegraphy in time of war or strained relations—for instance, a fleet of battleships at sea while their country is at war with a other power. Each ship in that fleet has its wireless installation, adjusted so that they can send and receive signals and messages to other squadrons at sea or in harbor and to stations ashore. One ship of that fleet is ready in direct touch with the navy department. The chance of interference from an enemy's ship is reduced so that to be almost not worth counting. Each ship in a battle fleet is responsible for some station ashore or for a cruiser squadron or flotilla or torpedo boat destroyers. All foreign intelligence as to the movements of foreign ships goes to the capital by telegraph, cablegram and wireless from different parts of the world, and from thence it is transmitted to the admiral in charge of the fleet, who directs his ship accordingly.

The whole safety of a battle fleet depends on wireless telegraphy in time of war.

When a number of battleships are steaming along, perhaps looking for the enemy, it would not do for the fleet to run into a superior number of the enemy's battleships. To guard against this a great number of cruisers are sent out ahead and spread a number of miles across. The duty of these ships is to keep a thorough lookout and report to the ship in the battle fleet looking out on their particular zone. This ship in turn reports to the admiral or Morse lamp to the admiral of the battle fleet. The cruisers are sometimes assisted by torpedo boat destroyers. Now, if thirty of these ships are used it will be readily seen that the area of their vision is enormous, and it would be almost impossible for a fleet to pass unobserved immediately any of the ships sight the enemy's squadron they would report at once by wireless, stating the number of ships sighted, with the speed, latitude and longitude, etc. The admiral would then give his order also by wireless. he Cruisers Take the Lead and Act as Scouts, Keeping in Touch With One Another and Report by Wireless to the Battleships That Follow.

Very few people realize the great importance of wireless telegraphy in time war or strained relations—for instance, a fleet of battleships at sea while their country is at war with another power. Each ship in that fleet as its wireless installation, adjusted so that they can send and receive signals and messages to other squadrons at sea or in harbor and to stations on shore. One ship of that fleet is already in direct touch with the navy department. The chance of interference from an enemy's ship is reduced so as to be almost not worth counting. Each ship in a battle fleet is responsible for some station ashore or for a cruiser squadron or flotilla or torpedo boat destroyers. All foreign intelligence and the movements of foreign ships go to be capital by telegraph, cablegram and wireless from different parts of the world, and from thence it is transmitted to the admiral in charge of the fleet, who directs his ship accordingly.
The whole safety of a battle fleet depends on wireless telegraphy in time war.

When a number of battleships are sailing along, perhaps looking for the enemy, it would not do for them to run into a superior number of the enemy's battleships. To guard against this a great number of cruisers are run out ahead and spread a number of miles across. The duty of these ships is to keep a thorough lookout and report to the ship in the battle fleet looking out on their particular side. This ship in turn reports by megaphone or Morse lamp to the admiral of the battle fleet. The cruisers are sometimes assisted by torpedo boat destroyers. Now, if thirty of these ships are used it will be readily seen that the area of their vision is enormous, and it would be almost impossible for a fleet to pass unobserved.
Immediately any of the ships sight the enemy's squadron they would report at once by wireless, stating the number of ships sighted, with their speed, latitude and longitude, etc. The admiral would then give his orders so by wireless. If the admiral determines to attack he directs the cruisers to steam at full speed and take up the rear of the battle fleet.

Let us suppose we are reconnoitering in hostile waters. The cruisers are ordered to spread themselves out as the vanguard of the fleet on lookout duty. They steam along without lights of any description. These great ships, invisible as the night can make ters. Yet they are very alive. Ceaselessly they communicate one with an-

as possible from external view, is the

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, March 22.—Wheat values shrank today owing to the surrender of Przemysl and because of unconfirmed rumors that Italy had declared war. The market closed heavy, 1½c to ¾c under Saturday night. Corn finished ¾c to ¼c off, oats down ¼c to ¾c, and provisions at 10c to 22½c decline.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, March 22.—The wheat market opened unchanged to ¼c lower, oats unchanged to ¼c lower, and flax ¼c higher to 2c lower. The volume of trading was very light in futures and with little or no export or cash business prices declined rapidly. The May and prices before noon was 2½c on grain and ¾c on July, and 2c on October under Saturday's closing figures, with a tendency to go still lower.
Oats and flax were quiet. Inspections on Saturday 390 cars, as against 340 cars last year, and in sight today were 800 cars for inspection, being the largest receipts for some time.
Wheat lost 1½c to 3c on the day, and oats 1½c to 1¾c. Flax was 3½c to 4½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, March 22.—A few loads of Manitoba spring wheat were sold over the cable today for March-April shipment, but the market on the whole is very quiet and ocean freight space very scarce in all positions. The local market for coarse grains was quiet with an easy undercurrent for the market for oats and sympathy with the decline in prices in the Winnipeg option market. The demand for all lines was limited. Flour continues quiet and the market is without any new feature to note. Mill feed is fairly active and steady.
There is no change in butter, for which the demand is rather quiet.
Cheese is firm under a fair demand for local account.
Demand for eggs is good, but the tone of the market is easy.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Nashville, Tenn.
March 14.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here to-day. We report the one on Fastings and Feastings, from the text, "When ye fast, be not of a sad countenance."—Matthew 6:16.

The discourse began with a discussion of the Lenten season.

Although not of Divine command, the custom appeals to many. Like every good thing, it is misunderstood and perverted by the majority, because not spiritually minded. To many of these it is a command, the neglect of which would bring upon them the disapprobation of friends, and the observance of which would bring them some Divine favor or some relaxation from proper punishment for their sins—they knew not what. Of such perfunctory fasting, displeasing to God and valueless to the individual—hypocritical fasting
—the speaker gave an illustration.
An acquaintance who professed to observe Lent, was instructed to drink but one cup of coffee daily during the fast, and compromised with his conscience by drinking his usual amount of coffee from a bowl.
Apparently the man thought that God would not notice the cheat, and would reward such hypocritical fasting.

Nothing is more contemptible in God's sight than a hypocrite, the Pastor declared. Honesty is the one quality which all pleasing to God must possess, no matter how weak and fallen by heredity. Jesus condemned hypocrisy more than any other sin. The first lesson with Christians and everybody should be honesty in thought, word and deed.

Although nothing in the Bible suggests a Lenten season, the Apostles commend fasting. St. Paul wrote,
"Approving ourselves in fastings," and "in fastings often." Evidently fasting is in the nature of self-sacrifice—not a thing commanded, but a voluntary offering of the soul to God, with a view to greater efficiency in God's service or to greater control over our bodies in the interests of our spiritual New Nature.

The Pastor then pointed out the practical value of fasting during Lent. On hygienic grounds alone it is of great advantage, particularly to the well-fed, to refrain from eating as liberally of meats, sweets, pastry, etc., as they were inclined to eat during the colder weather.
Boils, pimples, liver derangements, fevers and doctor bills would be greatly lessened if this course were pursued.

Next the speaker discussed the spiritual side of the question. He showed that the Christian may advantageously take a much deeper spiritual meaning out of Lent. He may recall his Saviour's experiences

TRIBUTE TO COTTON.

Henry W. Grady's Glowing Eulogy
Upon the Wonderful Plant.

Henry W. Grady, the silver tongued orator of the south, once pronounced this eulogy upon the cotton plant:

"What a royal plant it is! The world waits in attendance on its growth. The showers that fall whispering on its leaves are heard around the earth. The sun that shines upon it is tempered by the prayers of all the people. The frosts that chill it and the dews that descend from the stars are noted, and the trespass of a little worm upon its green leaf means more to England and to English homes than the advance of a Russian army upon her Asian frontier. It is gold from the time it puts forth its tiniest shoot. Its foliage decks the somber earth in emerald sheen. Its blossoms reflect the brilliant hues of sunset skies in southern climes and put to shame the loveliest rose, and when losing its snowy fleece to the sun it floats a banner that glorifies the field of the humble farmer.

"Its fiber is current in every bank in all the world. Its oil adds luxury to lordly banquets in noble halls and brings comfort to lowly homes in every clime.
Its flour gives to man a food richer in health producing value than any the earth has ever known, and a curative agent long sought and found in nothing else. Its meal is feed for every

ing in hostile waters. The cruisers are ordered to spread themselves out in the vanguard of the fleet on lookout duty. They steam along without lights of any description. These great vessels, invisible as the night can make them, are brooding on the troubled waters. Yet they are very alive. Ceaselessly they communicate one with another, for in each vessel, bidden as far as possible from external view, is the soundless and padded wireless room. Here the operator is at work, the electric lamp glowing brilliantly above him, but a messenger enters with an order from the commander. Immediately as the handle of the door is touched and pulled open by the entrant the lights go out, and pitch darkness prevails until once again the door is closed behind him and automatically the lights are switched on. That is part of the secrecy which prevails on a battleship in time of war.

The men on lookout duties are stationed in various parts throughout the cruiser. Their duty is to keep their eyes open, as there is always a chance that one of the enemy's destroyers may come rushing along at a speed of some thirty miles an hour, shoot a torpedo into the ship and get away unscathed. At the best of times it takes cunning gunnery to strike a vessel going at this speed, but in the darkness possibilities of the marauder's escape are increased tenfold, and only the eyes of the crew and watchers can, as far as possible, safeguard mishap. As soon as anything is sighted it is reported to the battle fleet. This is done by the wireless, and the operator is compelled to work at high pressure, for he has to read every message a cruiser sends, inform his captain and himself get in touch with the fleet if his officer should desire to send a reply. Then there is the admiral of a fleet to be considered. The operator must keep a good lookout in case some battle order should be transmitted from this important quarter.

All this time, remember, the ship is cruising at imminent risk not only from the actual attacks of a secret enemy, but from the danger of floating mines and even aerial attack. It requires no little personal courage, therefore, for the operator to remain in that closed wireless cabin, whence, should disaster occur, there is no chance of escape, and all the time he must keep his head and send and receive messages with a much nonchalance as though he were seated at home in the security of his own little den. But quiet heroism is one of the traditions of wireless service. Never yet has an operator been found wanting.—Boston Transcript.

Wasted Sympathy.

Professor's Wife—I suppose you have hard work and small pay. Piano Mover—Oh, we're not regular musicians, lady; we just deliver goods.—Life.

Negligee Sashes.

A sash is a part of many of the smartest negligees. Sometimes it is no more than a piece of narrow black velvet ribbon which is knotted about the waist. Sometimes it is a wide, soft silk sash that is tied in a loose, floppy bow in the back or at the side. Sometimes a sash is formed from an extension of the two fronts folded about the waist and clasped under a jeweled fastening at the back. Of course a big bow is rather out of place in a negligee, which, in spite of this daintiness, should be durable enough to withstand rather hard treatment. For when one is resting or dressing one seldom cares to be careful of the gown one wears.

There is no change in butter, for which the demand is rather quiet. Cheese is firm under a fair demand for local accounts. Demand for eggs is good, but the tone of the market is easy.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 22.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 1844 cattle, 1112 hogs, 118 sheep and lambs and 114 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice loads of cattle, $7.25 to $7.50, and one load at $7.75; good at $7 to $7.25; medium at $6.60 to $6.85; common at $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows at $6.25 to $6.50; good cows, $5.75 to $6; medium cows, $5.25 to $5.60; canners and cutters, $4 to $4.50; choice bulls at $6 to $6.50; common bulls at $5 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., $6.25 to $6.50; steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, $5.25 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers met a fair demand at $50 to $50 each.

Veal Calves.

Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $11.50; good at $8 to $9.50; medium at $7.50 to $8; common at $6 to $7; eastern rough calves at $4 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7.75; heavy ewes and rams, $5.25 to $5.75; lambs sold at from $5.50 to $10.50, according to weight and quality.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $3.50, and $3.35 fed and watered, and $3 for t. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 22.—At the Montreal Stock Yards there was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, the feeling being firm on account of the fact that the supply was much smaller than a week ago, and the quality better than ever. The demand from packers was good, owing to the near approach of the Easter trade, and a fairly active trade was done, but there was no disposition on the part of buyers to pay fancy prices for stock, as in former years. A few loads of extra choice steers were sold at $8, but the bulk of the trade was done in ordinary choice steers from the above figure down to $7.75, while many loads of good steers changed hands at $7.25 to $7.50, and a few extra choice, heavy bulls sold as high as $7.25 per hundred pounds.

The most important feature of the trade today was the decidedly strong feeling which developed in the market for hogs, and prices, compared with a week ago, show an advance of 45¢ to 50¢ per hundred pounds, which is attributed to the strength displayed in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week, the much smaller supplies coming forward from the interior, and the fact that packers have been doing a fairly large export trade in this line of late. A fairly active trade was done, as the competition for supplies was keener than usual, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $9; sows at $6.75 to $7, and stags at $4.35 to $4.50 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars. Five cars of northwest hogs were received by a packer, which cost, laid down here, $8.65 per hundred pounds. The prospects are that prices may possibly go a little higher in the near future.

Trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, on account of the very limited supplies coming forwards, and in consequence the undertone of the market is very firm, but prices show no important change. A few spring lambs were offered, which met with a steady demand, at $7 to $10 each, as to size and quality. A good trade was done in calves, but, as the offerings were not in excess of the requirements, the tone of the market was steady.

of our spiritual new nature. The Pastor then pointed out the practical value of fasting during Lent. On hygienic grounds alone it is of great advantage, particularly to the well-fed, to refrain from eating as liberally of meats, sweets, pastry, etc., as they were inclined to eat during the colder weather. Boils, pimples, liver derangements, fevers and doctor bills would be greatly lessened if this course were pursued.

Next the speaker discussed the spiritual side of the question. He showed that the Christian may advantageously take a much deeper spiritual meaning out of Lent. He may recall his Saviour's experiences during the forty days preceding his crucifixion. He may remember that just before His crucifixion Jesus instituted the Lord's Supper and indicated that date as the proper one for its annual commemoration amongst His followers, as was the custom in the early Church. He may remember sympathetically the Redeemer's trials at this season, and reflect that all Jesus' followers covenant to share His Cup of suffering, ignominy, misunderstanding, misrepresentation, slander, abuse and death; and that from the very first this season seems to have been a time of special trial amongst Jesus' followers.

These considerations might well move God's people to the observance of a fast during the period preceding the anniversary of their Redeemer's death. In so doing, from a desire to draw near to God, they would certainly contribute a share toward that end.

A study of the Prophet Daniel's fast gives valuable hints as to proper fasting. He confined himself strictly to the things which his system absolutely needed for the maintenance of mental and physical strength, ate nothing superabundantly and avoided dainties.

Fasting applies, not only to food, but to everything; it signifies self-denial of the desires of the flesh, to the intent that the spiritual nature may be strengthened. The true Christian lives a life of daily self-denial. Such mortification of the flesh, self-denials of the various inclinations of the flesh in the interests of the New Creature, are all fastings. The whole tenor of the Scriptures is to the effect that Christians are spiritually advantaged by allowing the Holy Spirit to rule in their mortal bodies—to the restraining of their natural inclinations, tastes, preferences, appetites, which the Scriptures declare are all vitiated more or less by heredity—by our share in Adam's death sentence.

Thus, as the Bible tells us, the Christian is constantly at warfare with himself—his new nature warring a good warfare against his old nature. In this conflict he is to come off an overcomer; and his victory will not be complete until he is actually dead according to the flesh and until, as a New Creature, he shall have experienced the blessings of the Resurrection of the spiritual nature. In joyful anticipation of this "change," the true Christian possesses the secret of a happy life.

Flooding Holland.

Holland's safety in time of war lies in her ability to flood great tracts of land. William of Orange flooded the country in 1574 and by so doing drove out the Spanish invaders. The same policy was adopted on the occasion of the French invasion of 1672. The movement of a lever at Amsterdam is sufficient to open every dike and dam in Holland simultaneously. It is said, to put under water within the space of a few hours the whole country from Naarden, on the Zuyder Zee, by Utrecht to Geertruidenberg, at the mouth of the Meuse.—Argonaut.

The First Express.

The express business was started by William F. Harnden of Boston. In 1838 he contracted with the Boston and Worcester railroad for the carriage of packages over its line. In the following year he arranged for a service between New York and Boston four times a week. He himself was the messenger, and he carried his packages at first in a small hand bag, afterward in a stout trunk.

CANADIAN ARTIST HAD VARIED GIFTS

It was a happy inspiration which caused the Toronto Art Museum to undertake a series of exhibitions made up of the work of Canadian artists who won fame in the past, when the artists efforts of the Dominion were taken even less seriously than they are to-day. The collection of over three score paintings by Daniel Fowler, R.C.A., which are now on exhibition in the gallery of the Grange, will serve to give an idea of the very pronounced merits, as well as the limitations, of this artist who was a Canadian by 50 years of residence, even if not by birth.

The first thing that strikes one upon entering the gallery is the wealth of color and variety of the work. Daniel Fowler had no affectations, and seems to have painted what pleased him in the manner that he thought would be most effective. As a result, a collection of his paintings contains a great range of subjects handled in a great variety of manners. His pictures give one the impression that he was clever at catching the feeling and the methods of different schools. There are some large landscapes at the Grange which belong in their technique to the earlier part of the last century, when the artist studied in the Old Land. These views are almost panoramic in their effect, with their amazing detail of distance. At the same time they arrest attention by their draughtsmanship, their color and their lights, the last indicating that the artist had made a study of Turner. It is interesting to turn from these larger pictures to the small water color of the old mill, hanging on the east wall near the north end of the room. It is very small, but thoroughly modern in treatment. The fame of Daniel Fowler as a painter of dead birds and game came in spite of his subjects and largely on account of his splendid coloring of such pictures. Several of them may be seen in the present collection, the best probably being the two of single ducks, one lying in the snow. His studies of flowers are also notable in the pictures where his exquisite tints may be found.

Although a large number of his paintings show scenes in Switzerland and Italy, Mr. Fowler showed in several of his pictures that he had caught the atmosphere of Canada. There are several canvases showing glimpses of woodland that are as typical in feeling as the work of the very limited number of our younger artists who have been able to catch and express Canada in a manner that every Canadian recognizes at once. It would be possible, of course, to dwell on the defects of the artist, such as his tendency to spoil a beautiful picture with an ugly or untrue foreground, but these are more than counter-balanced by the directness of his painting and his other decided perfections already mentioned. He had many of the conventional tricks of his day and often used old-fashioned devices, such as the drawing-in of detail to his water colors, though with wonderful adaptability, he did less of it as time went on. To any one interested in the development of Canadian art, the present exhibition of picture is particularly interesting on account of variety and the cleverness of the artist, while to those who like pictures just as pictures, his color and his sense of beauty in the study of landscapes will appeal. The exhibit has several weeks to run. Mr. Fowler is a native of Amherst Island.

Domestic Science Demonstrations.

Nearly 1000 women from the town and surrounding country attended the Domestic Science lessons conducted in The Town Hall by Miss Gertrude Gray, of the Womens Institutes Branch, Toronto. The highest days attendance was 130. The attendance increased from day to day, convincing evidence that the work was much appreciated. A deep interest was aroused in Womens Institute work and it is expected that additional womens Institutes will be formed in the near future. Places that have been recommended for new Institutes are Selby, Switzerville, Andersons Church and Tamworth. If any ladies are desirous of having a Womens Institute formed in their neighborhood, if they will apply to Mrs. C. F. Allison, District Secretary, Adolphustown, an organizer will be sent in June and all help given to start the new Institutes. Additional information will be gladly supplied by Mr. G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office, Napanee.

Another Triumph for Miss Luella Hall.

The Philharmonic Society of Belleville in the concert of Thursday evening last in the spacious and beautiful auditorium of Bridge Street Church, scored another great success in their production and rendition of that world renowned masterpiece of the immortal Gounod, "The Redemption." The music is a lyrical setting forth of the three great facts upon which Christianity is founded—the Passion and Death of the Saviour; His glorious life from His Resurrection to His Ascension; the spread of Christianity through its Apostles. It was a consideration of the terrible results of the war, and the fact that the whole world seems pulsating with sorrow and terror at this time that induced Mr. Cameron to select the presentation of the "Redemption." The music is of the most difficult description and required months of practice before its presentation. The Society was particularly fortunate in obtaining the assistance of three professionals—Miss Luella Hall, as organist; Mr. David Ross, baritone; Mr. George Dixon, tenor. Miss Hall has a provincial reputation as an organist. Our expectations were great, but Miss Hall surpassed everything we had anticipated. Her wonderful control of the magnificent organ recently installed in Bridge Street Church was marvellous. I have no recollection of hearing any organist who captivated and charmed an audience as did Miss Hall. Her accompaniments were perfect. In the scene of the Crucifixion her portrayal of the sweep of the storm, of the earthquake, the wails and cries of women, terror-stricken and heart-broken. Then the pianissimo effects, the low, sweet, sad strains produced so exquisitely—left nothing to be desired. We trust that this talented artist will soon revisit us.

City and Country Labor.

The unemployment problem is still existent in the cities and the scarcity of labor is still complained of in rural districts. The question is how can the one be reconciled with the other, and the one brought to supply what the other needs and the other to take what the one possesses in excess. After the war there may be a rush of immigration, but that cannot be for a year at least. We must, therefore, make the best of the situation and try to get along with what we have. DO YOUR DUTY.

"A parting word to our soldiers."

By A. Irene Cowan.

You have a duty to discharge,
A heavy task to fulfil,
You have the king's command a large,
And you have God's above to fill.

Shirk not that which is true,
Abhor that which is evil,
Indulge in no ignoble deeds,
Nor that which is below God's level.

Live up to the teachings of Christ,
Cleave to that which is good;
Honour all men in lofty height,
And stand in the way old warrior stood.

Follow the footsteps of your Master
Who is Lord of all;
Cling to the Godly, soldiers,
Lest the enemy thee appal.

Honor the British flag,
That floats o'er this vast Empire,
Be it an old blue rag,
It stands for purity and fire.

Truth and right stands for Britain,
Aim at these noble emblems,
Be a soldier-Christian;
Watch and pray along the way,
Lest thou loose thy Christ-like resemblance.

Do your duty, England expects it,
Do your duty, for God commands it.
Be pure, be noble, be bright, be brave,
And we will pray for thee while across the wave.

Obituary.

Deep regret was felt throughout the town and district when it was learned on Thursday morning that Mr. Frank Arnold, who had been sick of Typhoid fever in the Vermilion Hospital, had passed away despite every effort that skill, promoted by love, could do. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Arnold, of Mannville, and was known throughout this district, and was a general favorite with all classes. His frank gentle manner was a passport to the friendship of all he met. In the social circle he will be greatly missed, as also in the manly sports of baseball and hockey, in both of which he was an active participator and favorite. Great sympathy is felt for his parents and it is difficult to realize that Frank Arnold has ceased to be a part and portion of the life of Mannville. The deceased was 25 years of age and was the second son, and his death leaves to mourn a father, mother, brother and two sisters, all of whom have the sincerest sympathy of the community.
The funeral took place on Saturday at 2 p.m. from the Methodist church. The pall-bearers were his companions of the Baseball Club, while the boys of the Mannville Hockey Club walked as mourners for one who was a fair player and chivalrous opponent in the game. Truly it is said; "Death comes not at call nor mends his pace for prayers and tears."

Prof. Dall's Lecture.

The members and friends of the Historical Society who attended the meeting last Friday night were treated to a most delightful lecture one that will long be remembered by those who heard it. Prof. John Dall of Queen's University is not a stranger to Napanee audiences but this was the first time he has lectured here and in fact it was the first historical lecture he has ever given. He should certainly keep up that line of work. The Thirty Years' War was probably as little known to the audience as of the great conflicts which have disturbed Europe with surprising regularity about once in a century. Being a religious war, in which practically the whole continent was engaged and in which Spain was the country seeking complete domination, it was of special interest; and the fact that nearly all the fighting was done in Germany, which country at the conclusion of the war was completely devastated, made the audience think of the events which are taking place to-day. It would be difficult to listen to Prof. Dall's able address without continually comparing the two great conflicts. He was especially clear in his description of the part protestant England took in the events and in his explanation of the manner in which England was pulled into the war. Perhaps his most vivid description was that of the Scandinavian army and its triumphant march across Germany to the Rhine Valley, the death of the great Swedish general, Adolphus, and the subsequent defeat of his magnificent army. The complex causes of the long struggle and the part taken by the Catholics against the Lutherans, Calvinists and Anglicans were each worked out in clear comprehensive style, in fact the ability of the speaker to cover so much ground in such a short time and do it so well was marvelous. As the President of the Society said, in thanking Prof. Dall for the lecture, Napanee will be very glad to have another lecture from him at any time. The next meeting of the Society was announced for Friday evening, April 2nd, when Prof. John Squire of the University of Toronto will lecture on "France and the French people." The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

City and Country Labor.

The unemployment problem is still existent in the cities and the scarcity of labor is still complained of in rural districts. The question is how can the one be reconciled with the other, and the one brought to supply what the other needs and the other to take what the one possesses in excess.
After the war there may be a rush of immigration, but that cannot be for a year at least. We must, therefore, make the best of the situation and try to get along with what we have.
A Toronto paper has been publishing letters from a number of men who have accepted positions on farms.
They all, without exception speak in good terms of their experience. The pay is not lavish, but the food is good and abundant, the bed clean and life in the open brings a keen appetite for meals and a pleasant desire for sound refreshing sleep. One man writes: "I have tramped miles and miles after deer and dropped too exhausted to eat or sleep. Here when I'm hungry I have a good meal to go to and when I'm tired there is a nice clean bed waiting. You know I hated to break from the city but now Mary and I are both glad we came. You should see her with her skirt tucked up bustling to and from the barns. It's the pastoral life for us all right. Men who wander cities idle and hungry while there are opportunities like this offering are crasy."

Perhaps readers of this may think the writer of the foregoing has hit upon a soft spot. It is more than likely however, that he is possessed of that Mark Tapleyism that should accompany all desires for work. That hopefulness which leads to success and,
at this period of time, begets some fulfillment of the scriptural injunction to bear one another's burdens. Every man, yes and every woman who goes to work in this strain of spirit, and to all it is possible, is helping to take the handicap off somebody else's shoulders and is contributing to the welfare alike of his own country and the Empire. He is uplifting his fellowman, he is assisting in the clothing and feeding of his countrymen, may be his townsmen at the front, and he is setting an example that cannot be too extensively followed. He is doing his share towards reconciling the wants of the city with the needs of the country. He is also probably prolonging his own life as well as making matters easier for others. Above all he is proving himself a true patriot in earnestly doing his best to promote production.

THE MARCH TO THE BATTLE- FIELDS; OR, CANADA'S MEN ON THE WAY

The above is the title given a picture that will for many years to come be a highly prized treasure. It is a photographic reproduction showing the 32-000 men of Canada's first contingent breaking camp and on the march to join the Continental forces. It shows miles and miles of the white tents and the marching men. It is a most inspiring sight. The size is 20x40 inches, all ready for framing. This picture is sure to be a popular souvenir of the war as far as Canada is concerned, and will be in great demand. It is owned by The Family Herald and is being presented to all subscribers to that great national weekly newspaper.

GREAT BRITAIN'S HERCULEAN TASK

The Official Eye Witness with the British Army has issued a warning against the suggestion that the Germans are a beaten nation. He says that they are still well organized, have abundant resources, are fed up with illusions, and are still confident of ultimate success. No intimation was needed of the magnitude of the task that is before the Allies, but, if there were, this surely supplies it. In addition there is also vivid indication that the area of this greatest of wars will spread in the near future, and that countries now experiencing unrest in their attitude of neutrality will break in one side or the other. This, of course, means further withdrawals from agricultural and industrial activity. It also indicates greater shortage in Europe of all kinds of foodstuffs, grain, vegetables and live stock, and of horses. This depletion will have to be made up from countries that are enjoying the blessings of peace. One of these is Canada. It is our bounden duty to see that Britain shall not, as far as preventable suffer from a lack of foodstuffs or of such other useful material as this country can produce. In other words, both men and women are called upon to put forth their best efforts so that when the time arrives any deficiency can readily be met. The accomplishment of this does not necessarily imply extra labor, but it does particularly suggest more care in preparation of the soil and in the selection of seed, and in attention to the breeding and rearing of live stock. Towards this end the conferences promoted in connection with the Patriotism and Production campaign and the bulletins, pamphlets, records and reports that are to be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will greatly help.

A BILLION WHEAT DEFICIT.

According to reliable statistics there are tied up at the present about two billion bushels of wheat, the production of the countries at war. This is in the vicinity of half the world's total production of wheat. A recognized authority argues that granting that the warring nations produce a one-half crop in the coming year, a deficit one billion bushels will still be shown. The three countries upon which the filling of this deficit of one billion bushels will rest are Canada, the United States and Argentina. The combined output of these three countries is only 1,249,000,000; their exportable surplus would, of course, be much less, so it can easily be seen that the question is not one to be easily solved, and it behooves Canada to increase her productions as much as she possibly can, for when the war is over and trade begins to re-establish itself and the nations undergo a process of rehabilitation, the demand for all bread-stuffs must be enormous.

SASKATCHEWAN'S EXAMPLE

Now that the Saskatchewan Government has announced that they are going to close all bars during the war and that a vote will be taken on a majority basis after the war as to whether these places will ever be re-opened or not, the temperance question has become acute again in Ontario.

Although some of the details are different, these main features of Saskatchewan's proposal correspond to Mr. Rowell's proposals here which are to close all bars during the war and then to submit to a majority vote of the electors the question of whether they

What will the Ontario Government do on the temperance question, is thus again the live issue of the day.

The temperance people are none too confident owing to Hon. Mr. Hearst's avowed declaration that he prefers a zig zag method. Saskatchewan has chosen a straight road

NINE MILLION SHORT. ESTIMATED ONTARIO EXPENDI- TURES AND RECEIPTS 1915.

Main and supplementary estimates.....	$11,109,409
Further supplementary.....	3,468,955
Statutory expenditures, Based on last two years,	4,098,370
Total estimated expendi- tures,	$19,276,794
Total estimated receipts,	10,003,788
Estimated deficit.....	$ 9,273,006

These are not the deficit figures which have been mentioned during the last few weeks which were for the fiscal of 1914. These are new figures based on the estimate of this year, the fiscal year 1915 and it shows that the Province is still far behind.

Taking out $3,000,000 for the Hydro and $500,000 for the T. N. O. Railway, which may be revenue producing, it still leaves a net shortage of over $5,000,000.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE WAR.

It is to be noted that none of the estimated expenditures nor receipts for 1915 include war items. As a matter of fact the Government have now passed all their estimates for the fiscal year of 1915 and have not secured from the legislature a single dollar for war purposes. Any money they have spent this year has been obtained under special warrant.

In view of the fact that the Dominion and Imperial Governments did secure big votes from their parliaments for war, it rather confirms an idea which is becoming prevalent that the Ontario Government does not intend to use all the proceeds of the war tax for war purposes.

In spite of the arguments of Mr. Rowell and his colleagues, the Govern- ment, led by Mr. Hearst, refused to pass the Leader of the Opposition's amendment to the War Tax Bill stat- ing specifically that all the proceeds from this special tax should be applied for war purposes only. The Govern- ment did accept one or two Opposition proposals, among them their proposal that exemption of industrial concerns from taxation should not apply in this case. There will be no exemption except statutory ones such as schools, churches and similar institutions.

Seed Corn for Ensilage

What is the best variety of corn for ensilage in this country? This is a very important question at the present time. Last spring Mr. G. B. Curran of the Agricultural Office supplied seed to Mr. J. Card, Napanee who planted 5 kinds of Ensilage, and two kinds of Flint Corn side by side. The best Ensilage corns were as follows. First, Wisconsin 7; Second, Bailey; Third, Golden Glow; Fourth, White Cap Yellow Dent; Fifth, Leaming. In flint corns, the Longfellow S rowed was much superior to the North Dakota White Flint. To make this test more thorough, a special set of experiments will be conducted during 1915. Eight farmers in different parts of the County will be supplied free with seed of seven varieties of Ensilage Corns, enough to plant one acre. Thus there will be one-seventh acre of each variety of corn growing side by side, and comparisons can be made, so that the best variety may be found. Farmers who wish to conduct the above experiment are invited to apply to Mr. G. B. Curran, Napanee, at once, as only seed for 8 different experiments can be obtained.

Young Men Fired Upon In Brussels Streets

Rotterdam, March 23.—In many towns and villages of Belgium every man of military age is compelled by the Germans to sign a book at the town hall daily to indicate his presence in town. The Echo Belge now reports that at Ternath, near Brussels, young men instead of going singly, marched in a body to sign their names, the leader carrying a Belgian flag. The Germans, on the ground that this was an illegal manifestation, fired on them, killing two and wounding three. Much feeling has been aroused in Brussels by this incident.

Terrific Battle South of Ostend

Rotterdam, March 23.—The Flanders correspondent telegraphs that a terrific bombardment began this evening south of Ostend and is still continuing. Very heavy guns are engaged. Clouds of allied aeroplanes were scouting this afternoon. All guns have been removed from West Chapelle to the Yser and a big battle is imminent. German troop movements have ceased in Flanders with a large concentration on the Yser.

The Flanders correspondent telegraphs that the enemy is preparing to deliver an attack this week. People living near the railway lines have been ordered to leave their houses. Allied aeroplanes have been taking advantage of the perfect spring weather and appeared in great numbers over the Belgian coast, being furiously shelled by the batteries along the sea shore. Bombs were dropped on Ostend yesterday and did considerable damage to the stores.

JONES WROTE POETRY.

And Laid a Layer of Bricks For Every Line He Composed.

Several years ago I wrote an essay for the Atlantic Monthly on "The Hundred Worst Books." For a place in the list I selected a book in my library entitled "Poems on Several Occasions," published in 1749 by one Jones, a poet whose name was unknown to me till I perused his verse. The pages were so fresh that I cherished the belief that I was the only reader in a century and a half. I had the pride of possession in

Seventeen Belgians Executed at Ghent

London, March 23.—"Seventeen Belgians, most of whom were young peasants, were shot at daybreak today in the Ghent barracks, after having been found guilty by a German court-martial of espionage in the interest of the allies," says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., from Amsterdam.

Big Indemnity for Foodstuffs Seized

London, March 22, 11.20 p.m.—The prize court to-day ordered paid $600,000 on American shipments of flour and wheat detained on board the Norwegian steamers Alfred Nobel, Kim and Bjornstjerne Bjornson and the Swedish steamer Fridland. So far as is known this is the first money to be paid out by the prize court on American foodstuffs seized.

The steamers Alfred Nobel and Bjornstjerne Bjornson loaded chiefly with lard, bacon and other products of Chicago packing houses, have been held in British ports since the middle of November. The Fridland, from New York, October 28, for Copenhagen, with packers' products was taken into Kirkwall November 10, and the Kim, loaded with foodstuffs, was detained at Newcastle December 10.

Believe England Enlists Women

London, March 22.—The Daily Express quotes the following extraordinary article from The Frankfurter Zeitung, based on the belief that Great Britain, owing to the failure of male recruiting, has now decided to put women in the field. "It is, indeed, painful to see how the British are driven to the last expedients in order to obtain recruits. The supply of eligible men having practically ceased, all eyes are now turned on the women. The suffragettes, it is argued, have given substantial proof of their pugnacious tendencies. If these are in evidence in case of so large numbers of champions of female suffrage, they must equally form part of the character of the great bulk of English women. Hence a propaganda directly under the auspices of Earl Kitchener, is now being actively carried on among the women of England. In one large girls' school not far from Dover, more than 200 wooden rifles were distributed among the pupils, who are now being daily drilled and practiced. Thus we are faced with an irruption of Amazons on the battlefields of Flanders. Let them come, the heroic furies. We shall receive them with a tremendous salute of shells. Their sex shall not save them. On the contrary, it will draw against them attacks the more violent by artillery and rifle fire, because we know that for every English woman killed a moral effect much greater than that which the death of six men could produce would recoil on the hands of the English authorities. Let them come, then, these charmers."

EXPERIMENTS WITH FARM CROPS.

The members of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union are pleased to state that for 1915 they are prepared to distribute into every Township of Ontario material of high quality for experiments with Grain, Fodder Crops, Roots, Grasses, Clovers, and Alfalfas, as follows:

BIG ARMY, MANY GUNS CAPTURED AT FORTRE

Petrograd, March 23.—It is believed that the Russians have taken Przemyśl, nine Austrian generals, officers, 130,000 men, 2400 guns which 1000 are heavy cannon, besides a great supply of war material. The number of men exceeds expectations. The fortress, which now resumes its old Russian name of Perysl, is magnificently equipped in the way of engineering and artillery, and is defended with greater skill and determination than the Austrians shown anywhere else. Day attacks were impossible and night attacks were difficult owing to the use of many searchlights, but the Russians sapped steadily forward, getting the guns gradually into a dominant position till they could choose their time for the completion of the victory. With the fall of Przemyśl the Russians can now advance westward with the entire railway system at their power.

GARRISON ALMOST MUTINIOUS

Petrograd, March 23.—The meanness of official details from Przemyśl is said to be due to the heavy snowstorm that prevailed yesterday, which broke down the telegraph line. It is reported that nearly a quarter of the garrison had suffered with phoid and scurvy. Although the rats were growing more and more plentiful none but a few of the higher officials up to the end of January knew of actual starvation was impending. The real condition of affairs was learned by the troops when an aviator, who was starting with messages for Vienna, was shot down by the Russians and fell within the defenders' lines. At that time there was much grumbling in the garrison, and almost a mutiny. So of the Austrians slipped, through the lip at night and surrendered to the Russians.

MANY TURNED INSANE.

The investing Russian forces increased the intensity of their bombardment and the strain on the defenders began to tell more rapidly during February. Many were rendered insane by privations and disease. They filled every available place, but were without medical attention. The death list was very high.

Civilian inhabitants, who had been unable to escape when the siege began, swarmed about the forts begging for food and refuge, but the commandant was unable to care for them. The death of two prominent generals in February from typhoid tended to weaken the determination of Gen. Von Kusmanek, commander of the fortress.

By the end of February actual famine prevailed; scarcely a living animal was left. For weeks virtually only sustenance was obtained from small supplies of concentrated foodstuffs brought by aeroplanes.

A council of officers daily considered the situation, but not until they were convinced that there was no hope or help from an Austrian relief.

And Laid a Layer of Bricks For Every Line He Composed.

Several years ago I wrote an essay for the Atlantic Monthly on "The Hundred Worst Books." For a place in the list I selected a book in my library entitled "Poems on Several Occasions," published in 1749 by one Jones, a poet whose name was unknown to me till I perused his verse. The pages were so fresh that I cherished the belief that I was the only reader in a century and a half. I had the pride of possession in Jones.

It was some time after that I came across, in Walpole's letters, an allusion to my esteemed poet. It seems that Colley Cibber, when he thought he was dying, wrote to the prime minister "recommending the bearer, Mr. Henry Jones, for the vacant laurel. Lord Chesterfield will tell you more of him."

I was never more astonished in my life than when I visualized the situation and saw my friend Jones "the bearer" of a demand for the reversion of the laureateship.

It seemed that Walpole was equally surprised, and when he next met Lord Chesterfield the eager question was, Who is Jones, and why should he be recommended for the position of poet laureate? Lord Chesterfield answered, "A better poet would not take the post, and a worse ought not to have it." It appears that Jones was an Irish brick-layer and had made it his custom to work a certain number of hours according to an undeviating rule. He would lay a layer of brick and then compose a line of poetry, and so on until his day's task was over. This accounts for the marvelous evenness of his verse.

This was but a small discovery, but it gave a real pleasure, for should I meet my Lord Chesterfield he and I would at once have a common interest. We both had discovered Jones, and quite independently.—Atlantic Monthly.

OFFICIAL ESTIMATE.

The Russian war office announced to-day that 117,000 men were captured at Przemyśl.

The statement from the war office follows:

"According to figures given by Gen. Kusmanek, late commander at Przemyśl, the number of prisoners who surrendered to the Russians was nine generals and 93 officers of the general staff, 2500 officers and 117,000 men."

"The number of guns and other war material captured is being calculated."

Need Fires to Rid Serbia of Plague

London, March 23—"Just as it took fire to stop the great plague in London, so fires are needed to clear Serbia of typhus. Infected houses and the clothing of the people must be burned, as the disease is carried by vermin, which is omnipresent," said Sir Thomas Lipton to-night in a statement to the Associated Press, in which he recounted the appalling conditions in Serbia, where he spent a considerable time in personal investigations.

"The situation is entirely beyond the control of the present force, which imperatively needs all the help it can get, tents, hospitals, doctors, nurses, modern appliances and clothing to replace the garments full of typhus-bearing vermin."

THREE CAPITALS HAPPY AT FALL OF PRZEMYSL

Petrograd, March 21, via London—The Przemyśl garrison, which capitulated to the Russian army to-day, surrendered without a fight. The hoisting of the white flag over this fortress, which was said to be on the point of surrender on a number of occasions, caused little surprise, as it was generally known that it was in a terribly weakened condition, without food or ammunition, and its endurance was only a question of days.

War office advices reports that nine Austrian generals were taken, as well as more than 300 officers and 50,000 men.

The Russian general commanding the investing army has been decorated with St. George's Cross.

ENTHUSIASTIC DEMONSTRATIONS

A heavy snowstorm failed to check the enthusiastic demonstrations in which the civil and military populations united when the fall of Przemyśl was announced. The crowds floundering in deep drifts, which tied up street traffic cheered the officers and soldiers, who remained to participate in the celebrations.

The strains of the national anthem swelled in volume as the crowd gathered, while from other points throughout the city mysteriously hidden behind the dense curtain of falling snow, music burst forth and added to the general spirit of enthusiasm.

The moral effect of the victory on Russia will be very great.

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

The ending of the long siege is of great importance. It gives Russia control of virtually all of eastern Galicia and released the Russian army which has been besieging the city for service elsewhere.

Nothing since the capture of Lemberg and the victorious sweep of the Russian army thru Galicia in the beginning of the war has aroused an equal degree of enthusiasm. Newspaper offices and army headquarters were bombarded with telephone inquiries for information. Crowds stood in a pelting snowstorm before the bulletin boards.

FATE INEVITABLE.

The fate of the fortress had been inevitable since the failure of the last Austrian drive from the southward for its relief. There have been daily evidences of a shortage of provisions, and reports of the ravages of disease reached the besiegers from time to time. Gradually the lines about the city were drawn tighter, until within the last fortnight Russian riflemen were within range of the outer works. Russian artillery pounded the forts ceaselessly.

The Austrian sortie of last Saturday was preceded by such an extravagant use of ammunition by the artillery as to leave the impression that the besieged army was at the end of its resources and desired to consume the remainder of its ammunition prior to surrendering.

MENACE ELIMINATED.

Altho Przemyśl had been eliminated as a positive menace to the Russian troops operating in Galicia since it was isolated and surrounded early in October, it always had been a potential source of danger. Many stubborn battles have been fought by the be-

Dardanelles in Grip of Storm

London, March 23.—A Tenclos despatch to The Times, sent Monday, says:

"A northeasterly gale has been blowing for three days and the sea is running so heavily that the small Greek steamer which plies between Piræus and Tenclos, took 24 hours in excess of its usual time for crossing. The weather is most unfavorable for naval operations, and is thought to be enabling the Turks to repair their battered fortifications and to mount fresh guns.

"Ten battleships of the allied fleet are anchored under the lee of the island, resting after their recent tussle with the Dardanelles forts, and four mine sweepers could be seen issuing from the mouth of the straits.

lery as to leave the impression that the besieged army was at the end of its resources and desired to consume the remainder of its ammunition prior to surrendering.

MENACE ELIMINATED.

Altho Przemyśl had been eliminated as a positive menace to the Russian troops operating in Galicia since it was isolated and surrounded early in October, it always had been a potential source of danger. Many stubborn battles have been fought by the besiegers with portions of the garrison which attempted to break thru the investing lines to join relief columns, which, on some occasions, pushed to within 25 miles of the city.

It is believed here that the next important development in Galicia will be a new Russian advance toward Cracow, the Austrians having been virtually driven out of the territory as far southward as the Carpathians

GARRISON IN SORE STRAITS.

Austrian prisoners from Przemyśl captured shortly before the garrison surrendered, said that the fortress for a long time was in a condition of semi-famine, lacking bread and other foods.

Except for the horses of the Austrian officers, no animal, they say, was visible in the town, all having been killed to feed the soldiers, who recently had little to eat except conserves, which led to much typhoid and other sickness. Conditions were such, the prisoners add, that they almost led to a mutiny of the troops, who urged that the city be surrendered.

LONDON AND PARIS JOYFUL.

London, March 22.—The long investment of the mid-Galician fortress of Przemyśl has ended. Depleted by disease, subsisting on horse flesh, and surrounded by a superior force of Russians, the garrison has surrendered to the besieging army after a defence lasting many months, which up to the present is recorded as Austria's most noteworthy contribution to the war.

Petrograd, London and Paris are celebrating the event to-night—Petrograd and Paris in the spontaneous manner characteristic of those cities; London, with silent and grim satisfaction.

MOST IMPORTANT OF WAR.

The newspapers assert that the fall of the fortress marks the most important capture of the war, not excepting Antwerp, in that it not only releases considerable Russian forces which can be thrown into the fluctuating struggle in the Carpathians, but opens the door to Cracow and the plains of Hungary.

It is argued, moreover, that the moral effect of the surrender will be tremendous, the theory of the allies being that it will stimulate feeling in their favor both in Roumania and Bulgaria, just as the operations in the Dardanelles are causing an agitation in Greece and Italy.

Fifty Bombs Dropped In Raid Upon Paris

Paris, March 22.—Employees of the municipal laboratory discovered during their search of Paris and suburbs traces of fifty bombs thrown from the Zeppelin raiders. Two-thirds of these were explosive, and the others incendiary.

A group of deputies has requested an audience with Premier Viviani to find out under what conditions the Zeppelins were enabled to make the raid.

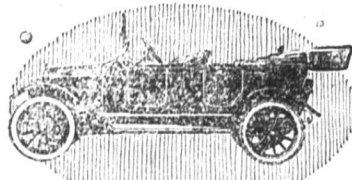

in excess of its usual time for crossing. The weather is most unfavorable for naval operations, and is thought to be enabling the Turks to repair their battered fortifications and to mount fresh guns.

"Ten battleships of the allied fleet are anchored under the lee of the island, resting after their recent tussle with the Dardanelles forts, and four mine sweepers could be seen issuing from the mouth of the straits.

"Puritans and petticoats!" muttered Craven after Mrs. Mason's retreating figure. "I bet there'll be a man at that typewriter next time," looking angrily at the empty desk.

Temple came in and looked at it too. "It's my fault," he said. "I should have sense enough to remember the combination myself. Poor Miss Dale! She's all tuckered out. We've worked her too hard."

"She's coming down in a few minutes, Mrs. Mason has just said," observed Craven, with a slight sneer.

And she did come down. The door on the other side of the room opened and Anna Granger entered. She was white as alabaster. The full terrible-ness of what she had done was tugging at her heart and soul.

"Ah, you have slept? You are better?" cried Temple, rising to greet her. Then turning to Craven: "Would you mind giving orders to the chauffeur to have the car ready in about an hour? We'll get there in good enough time."

"Got to go in that infernal eighty horsepower thing, after all. Bet you anything we strike a rock or something and hear angels' wings on our way!" was Craven's comment as he left the room.

"Miss Dale"—Temple fixed her gaze with a whimsical, ineffable smile—"the key to my liberty and my good name lies in my safe yonder. It is you only who can give it to me. I am glad." He came a step nearer and a great light shone in his eyes. "It is the princess of my enchanted palace who shall give it to me. That is good."

With one long sobbing that rent itself straight from her torn heart, Anna stepped back.

"What is it, dear?" he cried, springing toward her, a big, wrapping tenderness in his voice. "You know, don't you? I am cleared now. That letter is the proof I have been waiting for. I bring you honor, sweet; the penknife isn't all now."

"Oh, wait, wait, just a little minute!" she cried, struggling pitifully for self mastery.

"Oh, but surely you've guessed it, Anna. I love you with a love that has been waiting a good many years. I want you to be my wife, dear, won't you? Won't you?" He was holding her hands now compellingly, fighting for her answer in serene, unswerving fashion as had ever been his manner of fighting for all things that he wanted much.

But she swept back from him with a gesture. Then the words came with a rush:

not finish itself. The woman buried her face in her hands that she might not see the agony in his eyes.

Temple continued to stand before her, grappling slowly with the horror, which loomed larger and darker, as it closed in on him. He stared from her to the safe, then back again. He, too, drew his hands across his eyes to cut out the picture of the woman who sank now on her knees before him, sobbing bitterly, convulsively.

"I didn't think, you see. I couldn't think," she moaned. "I saw only my boy's names branded through life." Still he did not speak.

"Oh, why—why don't you say something? Why don't you curse me?"

A vast, overwhelming pity surged up in Temple's heart. Suddenly he forgot himself, his own horrible future, in the picture of the woman he loved so abased.

"Ah, you poor, poor little mother!" he said at last very gently. He laid his hand on her bowed head. "Please get up," he said hoarsely.

Anna rose and stepped back, her hands clasped closely against her breast. A light, akin to worship, shone in her eyes as she looked at him.

"That's what you have to say to me," she breathed—"that? It is like the magnanimity of God. I came into your life, deceiving you, spying upon you, cheating you. I've destroyed the one priceless thing that stood between you and prison, and now your thought is for me—my suffering and shame!"

Impulsively she raised his hand to her lips and held it there for an instant. It was not a caress, but a benediction.

"Oh, you prince of princes among men," she said reverently. "I have no words in which to tell you how I honor you."

Temple smiled sadly, remotely.

"I—I think I can understand why you came, why you deceived me, why you did this terrible thing. You were fighting for your children and the man you believed in, and you fought to the bitter end. It was natural, I suppose. I think I understand."

"No!" Anna's voice was low, but steady now, and she spoke with a sort of introspective finality. "No, it was not wholly natural. I—I had to fight to do it all. It wasn't easy, this deceiving you, this spying upon you. I had to go against my instinct every time—give the lie to my impulses. From the moment I saw you I must have been believing in you, I think. And every day since I've been here I've been believing more and more. No, you see, it wasn't wholly natural. I was fighting against hope."

"But the hope fought, too, didn't it, dear?" he asked solemnly.

A light leaped into her eyes.

"Aye," said she, "it was a fighting hope. It fought, and it has won," she whispered half to herself with trembling lips, looking far, far past him. And it was a joy to the man to see the smile in her eyes. "I know now with every faculty what my heart must have known from the first. I know that I—yes, I know," she shuddered, "but I mustn't say it."

"You love me!" cried he. "No, don't say it." He swallowed painfully. "But it will be a comfort to think sometimes that a scrap of the very best that is in you is mine. That can do no harm, can it?"

She could not answer for fear that her heart might tear from its moorings.

"That's the thing for a mother in your place to remember, right or wrong. Learn it by rote if it isn't already born in you. Your duty is to your boys, to give your boys an honorable name."

"Ah, if I could! If I only could!" cried Anna bitterly. "But I can't give them that, you see."

"You can give them at least the appearance of an honest name whether their father is honorable or not. I'm not pleading any longer for Robert, the scamp. Let the men out of it, both your husband and—Mr. Temple."

She of the Puritan conscience nodded coldly to one side to where the big financier stood silently, taking no part in the discussion. "After all," she added, "I suppose Robert's no worse than a good many other men in the world of finance. You shouldn't judge him so harshly, Anna."

Anna's delicate brows twitched. When she spoke it was in an odd, faint voice. Mrs. Mason and the whole room seemed to be moving out of her vision.

"I don't know many men," she said measuredly. "I never did judge Robert by a general standard. I judged him by the standard I held out to him before I married him. It was a pretty big one, but he knew it, and, God forgive him, he knelt beside me and swore it was his own."

"And now"—again that spasmodic twitching of the brows, while the low, measured voice went on—"and now it's not only against my standard that I balance him. I weigh him against one who is my standard's standard."

CHAPTER IX.

BACK FROM PRISON.

TO Mrs. Mason's narrow, unbending, shortsighted code everything in life was prepared in advance—a man's political convictions, a woman's religious convictions, a child's nursery stories, the babies' prayers. Her puritanic soul was outraged wholly now, and, flushing angrily, with an instinctive shrinking back of her whole person, she attacked the woman before her.

"May the Lord have mercy on such women as you, Anna Granger! You're wicked, flagrantly, deliberately wicked, to utter such thoughts. Isn't it enough to have the unlawful feeling?" She wheeled suddenly to Temple. "Oh, I've seen for a long time that you loved her. Every one has seen it. But I thought her sense of decency—"

Temple stepped forward at that, his eyes blazing.

"Mrs. Mason," he said forbiddingly.

"Don't you think you have gone quite far enough? Have you no pity, no sense of womanliness?"

The housekeeper winced at the man's tones. The words escaped her. Anna had risen. Very white and still, she stood for a second. Then:

"Mr. Temple, I must leave this house, leave it at once. But you may count upon me. When your case comes up for trial I shall be there. I am going to clear you. Mrs. Mason thinks"—her eyes traveling slowly to the elder woman—"that it's not because you're innocent that I insist upon giving my testimony. She thinks it's because I love you. I do. But you at least know I've nothing further to hope from this. I am Robert Granger's wife till death!" Temple bowed.

"Yes, I know," he said simply. "I quit the room quietly, leaving man and wife together. Mrs. Mason, who curiosity was quite as alive as her conscience, stayed. It wouldn't do to miss this meeting. Maybe it was a duty to stay!

"I want you to leave this house, come away with me at once. There's no longer any need for proofs of vindication, you see," Granger said Anna, hastily kissing her.

She submitted, battling down the shudder of disgust which the touch of his lips fetched her. After all, he was her husband.

"Yes, I'll go with you," she said listlessly. She wondered how she could live with this thief all the rest of her days.

"You see, Anna, every one knew was innocent; every one believed me. Now I must get away to some place where I can rest, where no one will ask me questions or harry me for I'm tired to death—to death. Oh still catching no responsive light at the immobile face before him, "It was your belief in me, Anna, that gave me courage all along."

She looked at him, shuddering.

"But I don't believe in you, Robert," she said. "I know."

Under the man's prison pallor rose a sort of grayish fright.

"Know! Know what?" he asked sharply.

"I know that you are not innocent, Robert!"

At those words all the bravado went out of Granger, as a tiny spark suddenly goes out touched by a block of ice.

"Sh-h-h! What do you mean any how? I am innocent; I am." He did not whisper now; he almost shrieked even as he had in court that day when the jury pronounced him guilty. An now, as then, he fancied he saw over his head the cruel Roman symbol of vengeance, the faces and the ax—saw too, the calm woman who sold the thread of life, crouching on the shadowy frescoed wall of the courtroom, a naked skull at their feet.

Something seemed to grip his throat. He strangled an instant, then he coughed and spat. He drew his hands across his eyes and pulled himself together.

"I am innocent, innocent!" he insisted.

"Don't! Don't, Robert!" cried Anna pity at the shameful sight of her perjured husband rising in her heart. "I know the whole of it. I've read the letter you wrote to Cornelius Brady you see."

He shook as a man seized suddenly by some deadly disease. Then instinctively, fearfully, he looked toward Mrs. Mason.

"She knows all," said Anna quietly. "Who has that letter? Where is it? Has Temple got it? My God, why don't you tell me?"

"There is no letter now, Robert. I read it, and I burned it without thinking."

"You destroyed it? Then it can't be used against me! Oh, Anna, you're a trump!" He seized both her hands and kissed them in a frenzy of relief. Even in that pivotal moment, though, when the weight of months had fallen from him and left him light, a suspicion came to him, a jailbird suspicion.

"But you said 'without thinking.' Without thinking what, Anna?"

"Without thinking that as well as convicting you that letter was the only

"Oh, but surely you've guessed it, Anna. I love you with a love that has been waiting a good many years. I want you to be my wife, dear, won't you? Won't you?" He was holding her hands now compellingly, fighting for her answer in serene, unswerving fashion as had ever been his manner of fighting for all things that he wanted much.

But she swept back from him with a gesture. Then the words came with a rush:

"Mr. Temple. I have deceived you. I have deceived you from the first. I have been here under false pretenses. I am not Miss Dale. I am married. I have two children. I am—I am Robert Granger's wife!

"Yes," she went on breathlessly, having been awed into silence for a second by the look on Temple's face. "Robert Granger's wife. Now you begin to see a little, don't you? I came here to discover some evidence that would clear his name. If spying, shadowing, tracking could do I meant to get it. I meant to vindicate him and to send you to prison in his place."

O God, why did he look at her like that? How could she go on? The pained amazement, the crushed suffering in his face, they were gnawing at her vitals.

"But it was idle," she went on, the sob in her breath cutting like a sword. "I've failed. I know now that Robert is guilty. I know that you are not. I have found that out."

"Ah, you needed to be told!" He was speaking more to himself than to her. It was the protest of his heart against the blindness of his heart's princess.

"No, nobody told me; I found it out myself. I—I read that letter you put there—in the safe. I thought it might be something that would clear my husband!"

"Poor little wife, poor little wife!" was Temple's only comment.

"—and it was just the opposite," she went on, struggling to finish her confession. "Sun and moon and stars and all the lights of heaven and earth they with every faculty what my heart must have known from the first. I know that I—yes, I know," she shuddered, "but I mustn't say it."

"You love me!" cried he. "No, don't say it." He swallowed painfully. "But it will be a comfort to think sometimes that a scrap of the very best that is in you is mine. That can do no harm, can it?"

She could not answer for fear that her heart might tear from its moorings.

When she spoke it was an eminently practical thing she had to say:

"There's some way at least, thank God, in which I can repair a little the injury I have done you. When your case comes up for trial I can give my testimony, I can tell what became of that letter. I can repeat it, word for word, the foul thing. My testimony would have weight, would it not? It would have weight because it would be against my interest."

"It would have weight with the jury, yes," Temple nodded. A pause. "But"—he hesitated, then went on bravely—"no one knows of your having burned this letter?"

"Mrs. Mason knows. She's an old friend of my mother's. I found her here by chance. She knows, but she won't speak. She's on Robert's side. Oh, but she must speak! She must!" cried Anna, with sudden resolve. "She must help in this. She must help undo the wrong I have done. Rite for her, please. I want her."

"Mrs. Mason," said she when the housekeeper entered, taking in the situation at a glance. "I've got to go to court and tell what I've done. I've got to tell the truth. My testimony means Mr. Temple's liberty—and more."

The old New Englander had been almost prepared for this. Nevertheless she turned toward Burton Temple in indignant protest.

"Surely you won't ask her to do this?"

He shook his head gravely. "I shall ask nothing," he said.

"You see, Anna. He'll not require it of you."

"I know," returned Anna dully. But Mrs. Mason didn't like the gleam that shone in her eyes. She attacked it first by cunning.

"You wouldn't have the heart to send your husband back to prison just as he's about to be pardoned or acquitted?"

"But he's guilty, you see, guilty as hell!" She leaned back in her chair with half closed eyes.

"Well, it's one thing to send a guilty husband to jail," continued Mrs. Mason, "and it's another thing to send your children's father there, branded a felon by their mother!"

She saw by the spasmodic clutch of Anna's hand on the arm of the chair how directly her shaft had gone home.

"You told me awhile ago that you'd failed in helping them," she pursued. "You needn't fail. Why, I'd let every man on earth go to prison and stay there before I'd forget that I was a mother and had two boys with two names to carry through life!"

"I'll teach them to make their names over. I'll look out for my boys." Anna stirred on her chair tiredly.

"You'll teach them to make their names over? Why, Anna Granger, you told me only a half hour ago sobbingly in your room how their father's disgrace would be thrown in their faces all the days of their life!"

"Oh, I know, I know," moaned the woman on the chair.

"Well," concluded Mrs. Mason.

about upon me. When your case comes up for trial I shall be there. I am going to clear you. Mrs. Mason thinks"—her eyes traveling slowly to the elder woman—"that it's not because you're innocent that I insist upon giving my testimony. She thinks it's because I love you. I do. But you at least know I've nothing further to hope from this. I am Robert Granger's wife till death!"

Temple bowed.

"Yes, I know," he said simply. "I want you—in my soul I want you—to be always as you are now—right and loyal."

"That is what I longed to hear you say, just those words," said she, with a little, quick, sobbing breath.

Mrs. Mason was forgotten. For a brief moment they two were alone, removed from the rest of the world. The silence was eloquent, yet never had Burton Temple felt farther from the woman he loved than now after she had made her heart's confession. He adored her inaccessibility, her code of honor as wife and mother.

It was she who broke the silence, and when she spoke the great motherliness of her voice sank into his troubled soul and quieted him.

"It had to come some day—the awakening. Will you try to believe me when I say it is not all a loss, because we will not allow it to be a loss? Because we are going to do right, you and I."

She smiled up at him with trembling lips and eyes running over. Then she lifted one hand and placed it upon his dark head, even as he a little while ago had placed his upon her own. And in this case again it was not a caress, but a benediction, and he understood.

She turned and moved evenly toward the door. There came a sharp rap, a feverish, insistent, wild sort of rap, and she paused. Cato looked up alertly from his nap and threw back his ears.

Temple stepped quickly to the door and threw it open. Then, in amazement, he stepped back.

"Granger!" he exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

A little white faced man, wearing a long ulster and carrying his hat in his hand, entered. It was not his close cropped hair and subservient hangdog manner alone which witnessed to the late prison life and discipline; the timid, interval spaced movement of the lockstep bore its witness as well.

He cast but one sickly glance of confusion at Burton Temple. Then he turned to the woman who stood stone still at one side of the door staring at him piteously.

"Anna, I've been pardoned," he said, coming to her quickly. "I came here at once, you see. I want to speak with you for a moment alone." His words were hurried, furtive, like the jailbird accustomed to sneaking whispers in the prison line to his pal. Involuntarily the wife shivered.

"There's no need, Robert," she answered dully. "There's nothing to conceal now; they know who I am." Wearily she turned to Temple. "The pardon has been granted," said she.

Temple bowed, without speaking. "Yes," broke in Granger with nervous haste. "They've been working for a pardon for some time, you know. You've seen it in the papers, haven't you? You see, the public felt that I was innocent, unjustly condemned, so"—

He paused, seeing a slight, beseeching gesture of his wife to Temple. The big financier understood and, turning,

ing. "You destroyed it? Then it can't be used against me! Oh, Anna, you're trump!" He seized both her hands, kissed them in a frenzy of relief. Even in that pivotal moment, though, with the weight of months had fallen from him and left him light, a suspicion came to him, a jailbird suspicion. "But you said 'without thinking! Without thinking what, Anna?'"

"Without thinking that as well as convicting you that letter was the evidence to vindicate Mr. Temple," answered she calmly.

Then Mrs. Mason, with a smile made it plain.

"Maybe your wife feels that an innocent man mustn't be sent to prison. Mr. Granger, or maybe she has some stronger motive. I remember you were adverse to her staying here the day that I saw you. Now believe, she thinks of giving evidence about the destruction of that letter."

At the last sentence the ugly, menacing, vindictive expression which had come into Granger's face at incriminating words vanished.

"Anna, it's not true! It couldn't be true that you would expose me!" gasped in a sort of terror. "You not going to tell about that letter? Why, I am your husband, Anna—your husband! I did certify that, yes, I did. But, good God, why should you want to ruin me?"

He sank at her feet in pitiful, flect appeal.

"Anna, as your husband, as a man who loves you and whom you have loved, I say, forgive me. Great heavens! I've repented. I've paid the price over again for my folly. What can I do now? I can't undo what's been done. It's you who must wipe out the stain; help me to begin over again. Your forgiveness would be absolute. Anna, you will forgive me?"

Curiously the woman touched his shoulder. Instinctively she wanted feel just a little bit alive. But might as well have touched a post in wood. It seemed as though the faculty of feeling had been obliterated within her.

"Forgive you? I suppose I must, Robert," she said lifelessly. "All men forgive. They were put into the world like priests or governors. I think only we are not supposed to give chances or sentences"—Her voice trailed off wearily.

"You see, Anna," Granger went on, trying to excuse himself. "I knew hadn't made the success of my life that you'd expected. It touched my pride to the quick to see you living that narrow way—you, who might have been a queen among women." A look of cunning came into his face. "And then, the boys!"

"But, Robert, didn't you know that I would sooner have worked my fingers to the bone and my brain to the white spot than have you do that awful thing? Didn't you know I would sooner have worn rags than have you steal?" She made a pitiful little gesture and ended with a half sob.

"I know, I know," said he. "It's enough now to see what a mad idea it was. But I had that chance to get fresh start in life. With money I could do big things; I could make myself that you wanted me to be. The boys were growing up. We needed more for them for college and to give them fair start."

"And listen, Anna"—he moistened his lips—"I've invested the money. put it in stocks that would pay me I was going to use the interest for you

I heard my children calling, and I could not reach them because I had failed, because I had given them a father who was a thief. And then—then I saw the flames beckoning in the grate, and I burnt the proof of their father's guilt—burnt it to ashes."

The appeal had gone home; he had aroused the maternal instinct, always dominant in Anna's breast. (The "Largo of Motherhood" in the "Symphony of Womanhood" was playing again.) She put out her hand toward him again with a quick, unconscious gesture, such as she used in the nursery when the children were tired or naughty.

"Yes, Robert," she admitted, "you do need some one. You need me, yes."

Craven's voice, speaking to the but-ler in the hall, broke in upon them. "Not in the library? Well, find him and tell him his car's ready now. Just saw the chauffeur drive up. Tell him I'll be with him in a minute. Have a letter to rattle off first."

"It's Craven, the attorney," explained Anna, following Robert's fright-ened look toward the door.

"I don't want to see any one," shiv-ered Granger. "Can't we go in there?" He motioned to a door on the opposite side of the room. Realizing how sen- sative he must feel, Anna nodded.

"Yes, go. I'll call you when he's left."

The door had barely closed upon his retreating figure when Craven blus-tered in. Evidently as yet he knew nothing either of Anna's confession or of her husband's presence.

"Miss Dale, please rattle off a letter for me," said he, settling down in a chair and pulling some notes hurriedly out of his pocket.

"But hasn't Mr. Temple told you?" Anna hesitated before taking the dic- tation.

"Eh? Told me? What?" snapped Craven, buried in his notes. "He'll tell me later, I suppose." Of course it was this matrimonial nonsense. "Mean- while, Miss Dale, you'll just take this direct to the machine, won't you? It's not long. It's to call off a lot of un- necessary work in regard to the Gran- ger woman."

"The Granger woman?"

"Oh, I mean, of course, the woman in the Granger case. Quite another thing, isn't it? None of that evidence is required now, you see," he went on, straightening out his notes. "We got it, though, all right, all right. Had it ready."

"New York Detective bureau, 1429 Broadway, New York," Craven be- gan to dictate.

Obediently the machine's keys tick- ed off the address.

"Gentlemen—Your letter of Oct. 7 received. I note you have evidence to the effect that Granger invested a large sum in New York Central stock, and the dividends were made payable to the woman he was keeping, one Rose Fanchon!"

The taut nerves of the secretary snapped at that. For one little second she half rose from the typewriter, then sat down, clinching her hands painfully together. Craven, at the slight pause, looked inquiringly over his glasses.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Craven," said she. "You can go on. The heat or some- thing—it was my head again."

"Sorry I had to trouble you again tonight, Miss Dale," said he, "but it'll only be a moment now."

"This Rose Fanchon is a high priced lady. I've learned, and Granger must have needed his one hundred thou- sand!" And he continued to dictate:

MILITARY ANNIHILATION.

The Term Does Not Necessarily Indi- cate Terrific Slaughter.

Many of the phrases of war are mis- leading to the reader who is ignorant of the technical meaning of military terms. That is the case with the words "annihilated" and "destroyed." The breathless reader learns with horror that "an entire division was destroyed while attempting to storm the forts at A.," or that "a regiment of cavalry, while reconnoitering on the flank of the enemy, was annihilated." He im- agines a terrible scene of slaughter in which all, or virtually all, the soldiers are left dead on the field.

The truth, however, is quite differ- ent. By no means was every soldier or every trooper killed; the division or regiment was destroyed or annihilated as an organization or effective fighting unit.

In time of war men fight, not as in- dividuals, but as parts of a fighting unit. That unit may be a regiment, a division or an army corps. In order to be of any real use those organiza- tions must be maintained. When the organization is broken up the individ- ual soldiers who compose it, no mat- ter how brave they may be personally, degenerate into a mob, and, as a mob or mere disorganized collection of men, that is done they are useless for war.

In the Boer war General Buller, with an army of some 40,000 men, at- tacked the Boers at the Tugela river. He was defeated and lost about 3,500 men, killed and wounded—less than one-tenth of his whole army. Yet his army was said to be destroyed, as, in fact, it was. After the defeat it had lost all organization and virtually de- generated into a mob. It had to re- treat about twenty miles, where it would be safe from Boer attacks, and there it lay for several months unable to make a single move until it was recruited, reofficered, re-enforced and, most of all, reorganized.—Youth's Com- panion.

Animals and Electricity.

Man has much greater power of elec- trical resistance or much less suscepti- bility than many other animals. A leech placed upon a copper plate which rests upon a larger plate of zinc is un- able to crawl off on account of the feeble electric action excited by the contact of the metals. Horses are trou- bled by slight differences of potential. An ox treated for rheumatism with electricity succumbed to a current ab- solutely inoffensive to man.

The Human Eye.

against me! Oh, Anna, you're a ump!" He seized both her hands and lashed them in a frenzy of relief. Even at that pivotal moment, though, when the weight of months had fallen from him and left him light, a suspicion came to him, a jailbird suspicion.

"But you said 'without thinking,' without thinking what, Anna?"

"Without thinking that as well as convicting you that letter was the only evidence to vindicate Mr. Temple," answered she calmly.

Then Mrs. Mason, with a sneer, made it plain.

"Maybe your wife feels that an innocent man mustn't be sent to prison, Mr. Granger, or maybe she feels a stronger motive. I remember that you were adverse to her staying on the day that I saw you. Now, I believe, she thinks of giving evidence about the destruction of that letter."

At the last sentence the ugly, commanding, vindictive expression which had come into Granger's face at her criminating words vanished.

"Anna, it's not true! It couldn't be so that you would expose me!" he cried in a sort of terror. "You are not going to tell about that letter? No, I am your husband, Anna—your husband! I did certify that check as, I did. But, good God, why should you want to ruin me?"

He sank at her feet in pitiful, abject appeal.

"Anna, as your husband, as a man who loves you and whom you once loved, I say, forgive me. Great heavens! I've repented. I've paid thrice over again for my folly. What can I do now? I can't undo what's been done. It's you who must wipe out the sin; help me to begin over again. Your forgiveness would be absolution. Anna, you will forgive me?"

Curiously the woman touched his shoulder. Instinctively she wanted to feel just a little bit alive. But she gazed as well have touched a post of wood. It seemed as though the very culty of feeling had been obliterated from her.

"Forgive you? I suppose I must, Robert," she said lifelessly. "All women forgive. They were put into the world like priests or governors. I think we are not supposed to give penances or sentences"—Her voice trailed wearily.

You see, Anna," Granger went on, trying to excuse himself. "I knew I didn't made the success of my life if you'd expected. It touched my pride to the quick to see you living in that narrow way—you, who might have been a queen among women." A look of cunning came into his face, and then, the boys?"

But, Robert, didn't you know that would sooner have worked my fists to the bone and my brain to a little white spot than have you do this foul thing? Didn't you know I would never have worn rags than have you do this?" She made a pitiful little gesture and ended with a half sob.

"I know, I know," said he. "It's easy for you to see what a mad idea it all is. But I had that chance to get a fresh start in life. With money I could do big things; I could make myself all that you wanted me to be. The boys are growing up. We needed more for them for college and to give them a fresh start.

And listen, Anna"—he moistened his lips—"I've invested the money. I put it in stocks that would pay well; as going to use the interest for you slight pause, looked inquiringly over his glasses.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Craven," said she. "You can go on. The heat or something—it was my head again."

"Sorry I had to trouble you again tonight, Miss Dale," said he, "but it'll only be a moment now."

"This Rose Fanchon is a high priced lady. I've learned, and Granger must have needed his one hundred thousand!" And he continued to dictate:

"Mr. Temple appreciates the good work you have done. Kindly send bill to date, but do not carry work further, as such evidence is not now needed. Very truly,"

Craven leaned back in his chair, comfortable and for the nonce communicative.

"You see, Miss Dale," said he as she addressed the envelope, "this little skunk of a Granger has kept this New York Central stock in his own name and only paid over the dividends to the woman. Pretty good joke on Rosie, eh? I tell you this, because I know you are interested in the case.

"The woman believes she has those gilt edged securities safely tucked away in a box, and he's fooled her neatly. Kept the stock himself, so he could buy another woman if he wanted her. I dare say. By George, that fellow did up everything brown! Well, Rosie wouldn't do a thing to him if she knew!"

He chuckled as he glanced over the letter Anna had just handed him.

"Much obliged, Miss Dale." Still chuckling, he hastily left the room.

CHAPTER X.

THAT FANCHON WOMAN.

"YOU heard, Mrs. Mason. You heard what he said," Anna sprang to her feet and whirled fiercely toward the elder woman. "Kept the securities in his own name to buy the woman he needed most; buy Rose Fanchon or buy his own wife! A moment ago you heard him practically offer them to me for my silence.

"Even then, knowing he had sold his honor for money, I was ready to believe he had done it for the best. I was ready to believe his excuse of me and the children. But he has betrayed me. His eyes smile lies; his lips speak lies; his lips!"

She rubbed her hands almost brutally over her mouth, as though trying to rub away the brand of some foul disgrace. With one last desperate effort for self mastery she walked to the door through which her husband had passed and commanded in a voice of deadly calm:

"Come out! Come here!"

"Yes, Anna, I'm here," answered he, appearing with a smile. Absorbed in his own thoughts, he had not noticed the tone of her words.

"Robert Granger, how did you dare tell me you needed me! I say, how did you dare! What kind of a thing are you? You thought you could buy your own wife. You'd take the money from—from Rose Fanchon—and hand it to me—to me! You don't need her just now; you need me! Rose Fanchon or me or another, it would be all the same. And that's the man I married!" She paused for a breath, spent with the fury of her scorn.

In time of war men fight, not as individuals, but as parts of a fighting unit. That unit may be a regiment, a division or an army corps. In order to be of any real use those organizations must be maintained. When the organization is broken up the individual soldiers who compose it, no matter how brave they may be personally, degenerate into a mob, and, as a mob or mere disorganized collection of men, they are unable to attack the enemy, and usually unable to make any defense against attack.

So, when the organization is thus broken, it is said to be annihilated or destroyed, although perhaps only a small part of the soldiers have actually been killed or wounded. Indeed, it is rare that a fighting unit survives the loss of more than 10 per cent of its men. That is because the mortality of officers is always higher than that among the privates, and when nearly half of its officers are killed or wounded the organization generally goes to pieces. In such a case the men go to the rear as individuals or in such order as they can maintain. There they must remain until the organization is recruited, reofficered and reorganized. Until

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

Scientific Farming

LIMING THE SOIL.

Old Problem Whose Value Is Not Properly Realized.

The problem of liming the soil is an old one, but very few farmers realize the value that it has to the field products. In the first place, lime is not a fertilizer, as I have heard some farmers say. It may be called a supplementary fertilizer, but that is as close as we can get. We know that it is needed to improve the soil conditions, and that is the main idea that should be known by every tiller of the soil.

Lime materials not only furnish calcium, which is essential for the growth of crops, but they have the power of improving the mechanical condition of both the sands and clays. This they do by binding the materials more firmly together. In talking to a farmer the other day about the lime problem he compared the action of lime on the soil to the process of making popcorn balls. The grains of popcorn are held together by the molasses, and in the same way the lime holds the soil particles in close contact with one another.

In the case of sands, lime thus renders them more compact and improves their water holding power. With clays, the tenacity of which is largely due to the fineness of the particles, the lime causes the fine particles to adhere to one another, and these aggregations make the soil act like one composed of larger particles. From this we see that it improves the mechanical condition, renders the soil more easily cultivated, and it is better aerated. Frost and humus also improve the physical state of sticky, impervious soils, but lime is possibly the most potent agency, and it is certainly the agency most readily controlled by the farmer.

We find that lime also corrects or neutralizes the acid which naturally forms in the soils.—Ohio Farmer.

nite uplift work, but the first problems to be solved in rural communities are those of organization and team work.

For instance, it requires the co-operation of a neighborhood to adopt single varieties of grain and standardize the product of the community so that it can be offered in sufficient quantity to demand better prices. Hog cholera cannot be eradicated unless the community works together in reporting the disease so that serum may be promptly administered, and such sanitary precautions taken as are necessary to prevent it from spreading. One man cannot drag the roads continually. An individual farmer can hardly be expected to keep his place free from weeds if his neighbors allow the same weeds to mature just across the fence. Smut cannot be eradicated from one farm if winds from surrounding fields blow across that place, carrying the disease spores.

Hold Tools on Grindstone.

When grinding tools by simply holding them with the hands against the stone frequent changes of angle will cause much extra labor and result in a poor job. The Scientific American illustrates a simple device to hold tools at a constant angle while grinding, which can easily be made and attached to the grinding stone as follows:

Screw on each side of the base of the grinding stone a wooden arm as pictured in the drawing. These arms would be slotted. A board a little larger than the ordinary plane iron is cut and bored with a one-fourth inch hole, running from edge to edge. The board is fastened to the grindstone with a hinge.

A bolt is put through the slots in the arms and the hole in the board. The bolt may be tightened up to hold the board at any desired adjustment. The tool to be sharpened is placed on the board and held firmly. This arrangement will allow tools to be set at any cutting angle.

EXPERIMENTS WITH ALFALFA.

The Best Rates of Seeding Under Certain Conditions.

Only by systematic experimentation on the part of the individual growers living in various sections can be proved the true worth of alfalfa as a soil improver and a forage plant.

This was the opinion which L. F. Graber, secretary of the Alfalfa Order of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment association, expressed at the organization meeting of the Kentucky Alfalfa Growers' association. He reported that in Wisconsin many of the growers have been carrying on experiments for several years to determine

Making the Little Farm Pay

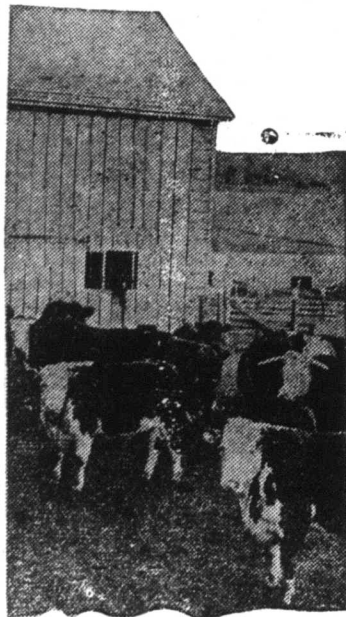

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

The question of marketing is of the highest importance to the person owning a small tract of land, and in fact no farmer can afford to ignore it. The small farmer has to treat the subject as vital and give it constant attention.

If located near a town it is feasible for a farmer to have private customers for much of his produce. The large hotels and restaurants buy immense stocks of choice poultry and fine vegetables and fruits. Many private families will buy direct from the farm if they have opportunity to do so, and they pay liberally for high grade commodities.

If we could have more small farmers to correspond to the financial means of land owners the immediate effect would be intensive cultivation and greater acreage production with the widest possible diversity. Then an improved market system would bring a higher level of wholesale prices for all products.

While these expectations are simple and reasonable, they indicate a social and economic revolution of national importance, for it is entirely feasible to reduce the retail price of nearly all farm products and thus cut the cost of living without lessening the earnings or profits of those who till the soil. The saving will come through the elimination of waste both on the farm and in the city, which includes reform in the middleman's method of marketing. Every move that is made along this line tends to protect city families from a further advance in the price of food.

In some lines of trade the wasteful expenditure involved in distributing goods is a most serious factor in the cost of living. This is especially true of the sale and distribution of perishable farm products, such as fruits, vegetables, eggs and milk. The farmer gets about one-third of what the ultimate consumer has to pay for such

THE SPOTLESS KITCHEN.

Spread newspapers over the kitchen table before starting to clean poultry or any other dirty work and see what a labor saving device it is.

When a table top is very dirty and stained sprinkle a good handful of common salt over it and scrub with hot water and soap. This takes out all the stains and whitens the table splendidly.

To secure a shining surface, wipe off the range with vinegar before polishing with blacking.

When plates and dishes have to be warmed in the oven, if a newspaper is placed underneath it will break the heat and prevent the plates from cracking.

Mix a little vinegar with the stove polish, then the blacking will not fly off in fine dust, and it will not take much rubbing to polish the stove. Polish it with old newspapers.

Tack up white oilcloth on your kitchen where pans are to be hung and back of the sink where water is likely to be splattered. Also cover pantry shelves and the kitchen table. You will find this a great labor saver besides adding to the appearance of the kitchen.

BLACK WITH COLORS.

Brilliant Decorative Effects Achieved by Means of Combinations.

The decorative value of black as foil for brilliant colors, which finds its peculiarly modern expression in wide hems and bands, was no doubt suggested to the couturieres by the magnificent imperial coats of the Chinese to which special attention was attracted after the looting of Peking in 1900.

On many of these brilliant garments the gorgeous colors and the gold designs are, as it were, framed by broad bands of black, and there is no doubt that the shining dragons and radiant blossoms gain a hundredfold by contrast with this sable setting.

It is striking to notice how one slight but very definite note of color introduced on a black or dark blue tulle can give it just all the distinction of the world. It may be supplied by the long ostrich feather of flaming red or florentine green, which adorns a hair or a splash of vivid orange against background of dark blue, or perhaps simply a large pink marmalade tucke into a waist belt.

If city people come to us and buy food or products out of which clothing is made is there any good reason why they should not pay cash down? The farmers who collect before they ship have bank accounts. Those who work on credit may have some profit, but they have more experience.

THE COUNTY ADVISER.

Success of an Agricultural Movement Which Has Spread In Many States.

The past three years has seen the beginning and the development of the county farm bureau movement in the United States. Ever since the foundation of agricultural colleges and the United States department of agriculture there has been a constantly increasing desire on the part of all classes of people interested to get before the country as a whole the best agricultural information obtainable in a concrete way.

At this time there are 313 counties in the United States, each organized with a paid county agent or adviser at the head of it. His work embraces silos, crops, live stock, cultural and tillage methods, better roads and is now found to be reaching out into the schools where agriculture is taught and introducing it into those where it is not taught, and into the question of markets and credits. In short, the movement has become an agricultural commercial club for each county to broaden its scope in every way.

Sixteen states in the Union, Indiana, Wisconsin, New York, Minnesota, Michigan, North Dakota, New Jersey, Ohio, Utah, Oregon, Washington, Vermont, Colorado, Idaho, Montana and Illinois, have already consented to let the county supervisors appropriate money for the use of the county farm bureau or development association.

The county adviser is always on the job. He not only visits the different farms in his county during the spring, summer and fall, but gives lectures during the winter and answers all letters sent him. He brings to the county in concrete shape all the scientific facts that have so long been bottled up in our colleges and experiment stations, which have by no means been put to general use. Through the local clubs every one finds out how the best farmers of each community are conducting such phases of their work, and consequently there is a tremendous tendency to adopt these good ways by committees, and thus great results soon become apparent.

Strange as it may seem, the smallest part of the county farm agent's work is advisory. The farmers resent the adviser idea, and justly. No class of people likes to be the subject of def-

the best rates of seedling and have found that from fifteen to twenty pounds to the acre are generally best under Badger State conditions.

Southern and northern grown seed have also been tried out in competition with each other. The reason has been that southern and southwestern seed, which usually is somewhat cheaper, seems to do as well under Wisconsin conditions as that grown farther north.

The Wisconsin Alfalfa association numbers 1,000 members and is steadily growing in popularity and influence. The policy of the organization is a conservative one. Its members not desiring to encourage the growing of alfalfa in places where clover grows more easily and luxuriantly.

A Young Musician.

Men seem to become musicians because of the inspiration born within them, and the force is developed at an early age. Handel, who was the greatest musical composer of his age, was so devoted to music in childhood that his father forbade his musical studies. At the age of eleven he greatly delighted and surprised Frederick I. of Prussia by his inspiring playing. In his youth he was made organist at Halle.

ination, or waste both on the farm and in the city, which includes reform in the middleman's method of marketing. Every move that is made along this line tends to protect city families from a further advance in the price of food.

In some lines of trade the wasteful expenditure involved in distributing goods is a most serious factor in the cost of living. This is especially true of the sale and distribution of perishable farm products, such as fruits, vegetables, eggs and milk. The farmer gets about one-third of what the ultimate consumer has to pay for such goods, and the balance is swallowed up in costs of distribution and in profits of the series of middlemen through whose hands farm produce goes in its journey from the farm to the dinner table.

In many other cases, however, the cost of selling and distributing goods is relatively very small, and what is needed today is some general improvement in the system of handling those articles of every day consumption which are now loaded down with unnecessary costs and profits.

There are many good things that result from co-operative selling and shipping associations. It helps the farmers to get next to the business, for their manager is willing to give them detailed reports of what has been done. It familiarizes them with grades of stock and the different prices that are paid. It acts also as a stimulus to better fitting for the markets, as it shows what conditions on the same class of stock mean in the market prices. Farmers are able to tell by receipts when it is the best time to fit certain classes of stock for the market. It shows whether a 300 pound hog is better for one season of the year than another and whether the heavy beef steer is suited for a certain season. We have been told much about the difference by shippers, but have always been more or less skeptical. In many cases where competitive buying and shipping were going on we had good reason to doubt. These associations also bring the farmers together, and benefits of a social nature are derived from them. New ideas and fields of operation result from their meeting together.

Owners of small farms which are located right for town marketing will find it best to have private customers for everything, while those located farther out should aim to become associated with other farmers who have a variety of products and who wish to form some kind of a co-operative association. The extra prices secured by these businesslike methods of marketing farm products may mean the difference between success and failure.

Co-operation In Potatoes.

Better community co-operation in growing potatoes of one or two varieties and then careful grading would mean thousands of dollars to some sections of the country and the establishment of a steady market for their product. Now is a good time to consider potato seed in farmers' club meetings.

When you comb back the hair with the fingers over the scalp and massage with a rotary movement. It is best to wet the fingers with some good oil or if the hair be dry to put a bit of vaseline on tip of each finger, spreading it evenly over the ends, rubbing the fingers of the left hand over the right. Now run the fingers over the scalp and manipulate it with a rotary motion. As soon as the scalp assimilates the grease apply more as described. This is a simple and efficacious way of applying a stimulant to the scalp.

There was a stop of several minutes at Trenton, and the tall traveler rose from his seat and said with a yawn, "I guess I'll get out and stretch my leg a bit." "Good gracious," exclaimed the other; "don't do that unless you are prepared to pay double fare or to take a compartment all to yourself!"—Chicago News.

Chiffon and silk, lace, tulle and crepe de chine are lavishly and effectively manipulated in lingerie and negligees, and the limit of daintiness seems to have been reached.

All the usual fabrics for lingerie are still employed. As far as fabrics go, there is not much that is new. One thing is noticeable about present day lingerie, especially when it is made at home—lace is not so lavishly used as it gerie, for embroidery can easily be substituted as a decoration, and net and tulle and other filmy fabrics can be used to give the desired daintiness to the garments.

Taffeta is much used for underwear, and that is not trimmed with lace. There are new pussy willow taffeta nightgowns made in the simplest manner, with a little picot finish at neck and arms. They are sleeveless and Grecian in their simplicity of cut. There are two long slits for the arms, and the gown hangs in folds and lines of great beauty.

Camisoles are as attractive as they have been ever since the use of chiffon and crepe de chine for underwear began. The camisole proper has two bands of ribbon or strips of lace over the shoulders. And as this has been found wanting for some uses, a camisole with two tiny lace sleeves just at the shoulders and tops of the arms has been devised. This little garment is decidedly useful to wear under transparent blouses.

Colored lingerie is more and more worn, especially with negligees. Some in yellow crepe de chine and chiffon, with ribbons of pale violet, has lately been shown, and soft green lingerie is another novelty.

Some new combination garments are made of pink lawn. The lawn is rather bright in shade, but its brightness will doubtless fade after the first washing.

The brassiere and corset cover pictured here is of white pussy willow taffeta, boned in the front and with the side gore shaped to insure a perfect fit. It is trimmed with torchon lace with a narrow beading of pink ribbon.

TAFFETA BRASSIERE.

was once upon a time. The war has stopped the importation—even the manufacture—of many kinds of lace. In the lingerie one buys in the shops the difference is hardly noticeable, for probably the manufacturers had made much of the lingerie now shown before the trouble was pronounced.

Even if lace becomes scarcer and scarcer we may still have lovely lin-

KITCHEN UTENSILS.

Aluminium Vessels Usually Are Good Investments.

The sorting and examining of pots and pans should not be left to the judgment of a maid. The housewife herself should make out an intelligent list of those articles which must be replaced and add as many others as her purse will allow. Every large store has tabulated lists and suggestions for kitchen outfits, which is often of assistance, but the interested housekeeper will take pleasure in seeing for herself what new things are put upon the market.

Aluminium ware looks so bright and attractive that every one covets it for her own. It is about twice as expensive as enameled ware, but has many times the wearing qualities and neither cracks nor burns, so a good suggestion is to buy one or several pieces at a time, if economy so demands, and thus gradually get together an assortment.

It looks attractive, gleaming upon the shelves, as did the lovely pewter of olden days. Aluminium does not easily become discolored, but when the alkali in water does turn it dark a few crystals of oxalic acid dropped into boiling water will soon make it as bright as ever.

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

MADAM M. CHARBONNEAU

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest stomach tonic in the world and will always cure Indigestion, Sour Stomach, "Heartburn", Dyspepsia and other Stomach Troubles.

NORFOLK SUITS.

For Morning Wear They Are Exceedingly Chic and Becoming.

In style the trig morning costume for spring affects Norfolk lines. The skirts are undoubtedly wider, but not in the exaggerated mannish characteristic of some of the models of the winter. Generally the skirts are gored and flare gradually from hip to ankle. Of course they are short, and in many instances the yoke is a feature.

The great majority of these skirts are furnished with pockets or at any rate with a single pocket cut in patch effect and of generous proportions.

White mother-of-pearl buttons are used with decorative effect to define the seam down the center of the skirt when such a seam is used. It may be said that the three gore and four gore skirt models are making a decided bid for popularity.

Rather Heartless.

"That fellow earns $10 a week and spends $8 of it on you."

"He is rather reckless," admitted his girl carelessly.

"I shouldn't think your mother would want you to receive his attentions."

"Oh, mother knows that a financier of his type will never be able to talk matrimony."—Kansas City Journal.

OUR NEXT GREAT STORY!

Beginning First Week in April.

Grips Your Heart!

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever read or seen that you'll forget the best among the rest.

The Story

We cinched the exclusive publication rights to Louis Joseph Vance's new sensation, The Trey O' Hearts—we did it at a price that staggered other publishers—biggest sum ever paid for a serial of its kind.

The Pictures

The Universal Film Manufacturing Co. pronounced The Trey O' Hearts the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny

You read a paper regularly. Read ours and get all the soul-stirring, heart-gripping installments of The Trey O' Hearts—it sets a mile mark in literature and it won't cost you a penny more to read it.

Overshadowed

"The Fortune Hunter"—"The Black Bag"—"The Brass Bowl"—Louis Joseph Vance wrote 'em all. You know what millions thought of these stories. You know how they gripped—thrilled and inspired. But The Trey O' Hearts overshadows them all. Vance has set himself a mark in this story he'll never beat and we doubt if even he, master of the written word, will ever pen another like it. Action—plot and telling, all combine to push The Trey O' Hearts into the top notch of the best sellers in record time.

Mental Back Somersaults

No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of The Trey O' Hearts one inch ahead of the words you're reading or the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way whether you're reading the story or seeing the pictures.

Superhuman Imagination

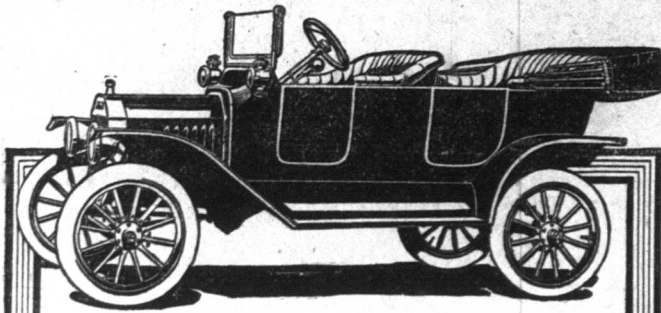

The imagination of this man Vance is superhuman—surprise is too mild a word to describe situations The Trey O' Hearts is filled with to overflowing. And the end of every installment, written or pictured, is a startling climax that leaves you tense in every nerve, waiting and watching for the next one.

Mr. Blake Mowers, a well-known resident of Napanee, died in Kingston General Hospital on Friday last. Mr. Mowers went to Kingston to have an operation performed for cancer, but on examination the surgeons found that he was so far gone that an operation could not possibly save his life. The remains were brought to Napanee and the funeral took place from his late residence, Mill street, on Monday afternoon. The Orange Order took charge of the funeral. One sister, Miss Augusta Mowers, remains.

The funeral took place on Saturday from the train to the cemetery at Rockwood, Ont., of the late W. J. Pasmore, M.D., formerly of Toronto, and recently of Deseronto, Ont. In the early days of his practice in Waterloo county, the late Dr. Pasmore was prominent in political circles, acting for many years as township organizer for the late I. E. Bowman, M.P. (Liberal), father of Mr. Charles M. Bowman, M.P. for North Bruce. He was also among the first active temperance workers in Ontario at a time when temperance legislation and those who advocated it were not as popular as now, and when petty persecutions of the "cranks," so-styled, were not uncommon.

OBITUARY.

Bessie Marian Abrams, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Abrams, died very suddenly at her home in Mount Pleasant, Richmond, on March 11th. Bessie was rocked to sleep by her mother about eleven o'clock and laid down for her usual daily nap. At one o'clock they heard a noise in her room and on going to her bedside found her in convulsions. Medical aid was at once summoned, but in spite of all that loving hands could do the little sufferer passed away about four o'clock the same day. The funeral service was held on Saturday afternoon by the pastor, Rev. E. B. Cook, who delivered a very pleasing and comforting discourse, to the sorrowing parents and friends. Bessie was a bright and beautiful child of one and a half years of age. The parents have the sympathy of the community in this their hour of grief, but find comfort in the knowledge that "She has gone to be with Jesus, and with the angels dwell."

LIGHT HOGS.

Montreal, March 24th, 1915.

Messrs. J. W. Hamby and F. E.
Vanluvan,

Napanee.

Gentlemen—We notice the large percentage of lights in your shipment which arrived to-day, and as mentioned to you, we have been obliged to make a cut on light hogs, so are writing you to advise that from now on, any light hogs that you bring in here it will be necessary for us to make a cut of 60c a 100 pounds.
This means that hogs weighing under 135 lbs., will have to be docked. As you know this is equal to about 150 lbs., at the shipping point, so we hope you will take this up with the farmers in your district, and try and hold these hogs back, or get a deduction made at your end.

We are satisfied that all the Packers are making this cut, as we cannot in any way, handle this class of hog.

If these hogs were held back in the country for another three or four weeks, they would be well finished,

Presentation of Prizes and St. Patrick Programme

Two very enjoyable hours were spent at the West Ward school last Friday afternoon, by a number of the members of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E., and their friends, when an interesting Irish concert was given by the boys and girls of Miss Harrison's room and the successful competitors in the essay contest were awarded their prizes.

The schoolroom, with its blackboards decorated with well sketched and colored shamrocks and golden harps, and green wreaths, was redolent of St. Patrick and Ould Ireland; while the girls with green ribbons tying their hair, and boys emulating the famous "Kelly" in the color of their neckties carried out the spirit of the entertainment. The numbers on the program, readings, recitations, songs, etc., were too numerous to speak of individually, but mention must be made of six little girls, whose sweet true voices surely promise to Napanee some fine vocalists.

After the first half of the program was carried out, Mr. Mackay, the Principal, acting as Chairman, called upon the Regent of the Chapter, Mrs. Harshaw, to announce the names of the winners and to present the prizes. After making a short address to the Regent presented to the school, on behalf of the Chapter, a shield made of copper, taken from Nelson's ship Victory, and mounted on a larger shield of English oak.
She asked the Principal to affix to the shield the name of the pupil having the greatest proficiency in history combined with highest marks for good conduct.

The Regent was assisted by the Secretary, Mrs. U. M. Wilson, who presented "The Idylls of the King" to Miss Grace Wilson for her essay on Sarah Maxwell; and by Mrs. W. G.
Wilson, who gave to Miss Kathleen Graham, who wrote on Laura Secord,
"The Song of Hiawatha". Miss Neva Sine, the subject of whose essay was also Laura Secord, received from the Regent "The Wonderland Book of

GRACE METHODIST CHURCH.
 The special evangelistic services which have been held in Grace Methodist Church, for the past four weeks closed on Wednesday evening last. The meetings began in a very humble way, under the leadership of the pastor, in the Sunday School room, and with an attendance of only 80. But the interest and the attendance steadily grew, until at the end of one week the Sunday School room was filled, on the next night the primary room was opened, on Thursday night the Bible Class room, and on Friday night the meeting moved into the auditorium of the Church. From the first the meetings were marked by deep spiritual power, and with but one exception there were seekers at every meeting. And the range of the influence of the meetings is beyond human calculation, because the seekers were from Arnprior, Deseronto, Newburgh, Tamworth, and all the small villages around. Perhaps the climax was reached on Wednesday night. The attendance was remarkable, probably 450 present. Then the fellowship service was an inspiration, 177 spoke in 25 minutes. But the most remarkable part of the service were the seekers at the altar. Twenty-six came forward to the front, and these represented married men and women, young men and women and a few boys and girls. "Not unto us, not unto us, but unto God will we give all the glory."

135 lbs., will have to be docked. As you know this is equal to about 150 lbs., at the shipping point, so we hope you will take this up with the farmers in your district, and try and hold these hogs back, or get a deduction made at your end.
 We are satisfied that all the Packers are making this cut, as we cannot in any way, handle this class of hog.
 If these hogs were held back in the country for another three or four weeks, they would be well finished, and would net the farmer a bigger price in the end than what they could obtain for them now.
 As mentioned to you, a large quantity of the light hogs that you had in here to-day will not weigh over 100 pounds live, and are not fit for dressing, therefore, we will be obliged to sell them out alive for feeding purposes.

The Regent was assisted by the Secretary, Mrs. U. M. Wilson, who presented "The Idylls of the King" to Miss Grace Wilson for her essay on Sarah Maxwell; and by Mrs. W. G. Wilson, who gave to Miss Kathleen Graham, who wrote on Laura Secord, "The Song of Hiawatha". Miss Neva Sine, the subject of whose essay was also Laura Secord, received from the Regent "The Wonderland Book of Tanglewood Tales" by Hawthorne. The Regent also presented the prizes won by the younger competitors in Miss Harrison's room. Miss Helen Wallace, who wrote on Madeline de Vercheres, received a copy of "The Secret Garden" and a small medal inscribed, made of copper from the ship Victory; To Donald Scott was given Ralph Connor's "Glenarry School Days" and a medal similar to that presented to Miss Wallace, for his essay on Abigail Becker.

The Rev. Mr. Sellery then made a short but interesting address. A recess followed which no doubt the pupils would like to pass in the same manner each school day, when a procession of boys and girls in dainty brought in a lavish supply of delicious aprons decorated with shamrocks, homemade candy for their guests and fellow students.

After the last half of the program was carried out the proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The guests of the afternoon carried away very pleasant memories of the interesting entertainment and the hospitality extended to them by the teachers and pupils of West Ward school.

"GROW AN ACRE OF HILL CORN."

Mr. G. B. Curran of the Agricultural Office, has inaugurated a "Grow an Acre of Hill Corn Campaign." Every farmer in the County of Lennox and Addington is urged to plant at least one acre to hill corn. This corn will ripen and take the place of high-priced feeds, bran, shorts, etc. Mr. Leo Flynn, north of Enterprise, last year raised on one measured acre of land 105 bushels of shelled corn per acre. This corn was used for feeding the hogs, chickens, and was ground up for other stock and a large amount of valuable fodder was fed to the cattle. The variety of corn Mr. Flynn grew was the Long-fellow 8 rowed yellow flint. No other farm crop will produce as much feed as an acre of flint corn and in this year when the need of increased production is so urgent, every farmer is urged to plant at least an acre of flint or hill corn.
